Meat Price Sag Viewed Cautiously By Experts

Rebound Expected Unless Current Drop Indicates General Slump

Meat prices will advance again, unless there is a recession, to levels even higher than before the recent break, Department of Agriculture experts said yesterday.

They saw no real relief for meat consumers unless the grain market collapse should touch off a general slump with curtailment of industrial production. Otherwise, they said, currently easier prices for bacon and some other pork products are temporary. They added that consumer demand will be the controlling factor and, if it remains at present levels, return to prices as high as or higher than before the break would be inevitable.

Starting Seasonal Decline

"Meat production is going into its seasonal decline," said one expert. "Prices will naturally go up unless consumer demand falls off. The only way we could have cheap meats this year is to have a depression with people laid off."

Another said the meager drop in bacon prices last week would have come earlier except for heavy movement of pork into storage during the winter slaughtering season. When it did come, he said, it was due to failure of hog marketing to decline as expected, gradual jamming up of storage space, and the knowledge by retailers that housewives "would be watching bacon prices."

To Seek Cause of Break

Two Senate committees, meanwhile prepared to dig into reasons for the market break. One is studying speculation and its probable effect on the market, while the other is considering market control legislation.

A subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee will hear today from E. T. Maynard, Chicago grain trader said to have made more than $200,000 in a few days during the break. He was named by Agricultural Secretary Anderson as active in the market at the time of the February 4 breaks and was estimated by Anderson to have made $300,000 to $400,000 in a few days. Maynard said $200,000 would be more nearly correct.

Chairman Capper (R., Kans.) of the Senate Agriculture Committee, which resumes study today of market controls, said yesterday that

Truman Hits Living Costs

Millions in Peril, Mayors Parley Told

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—President Truman said today that living standards of millions of families "will be critically endangered" if the rise in the cost of living is not permanently checked.

The President's statement was contained in a message to the United States Conference of Mayors which opens here tomorrow.

Mr. Truman also called on Congress to curb inflation and to enact a long-range housing bill.

His message, sent to Mayor George W. Welsh of Grand Rapids, Mich., president of the conference, said:

"The sharp rise in the cost of living index points to the undermining of our whole economy. If this rise is not permanently checked the living standard of millions of families will be critically endangered.

"Immediate steps must also be taken to increase the Nation's supply of low-cost housing. The enactment of a broad long-range housing bill is long overdue. Such a bill is necessary if the Federal Government is to fulfill its part of the responsibility—shared also by State and local governments—to insure that every American family has a decent home. . . ."

Charles Hurd to Speak at Book and Author Luncheon

One of four authors to speak at The Washington Post's Book and Author Luncheon Wednesday is Charles Hurd, long-time Washington newspaperman, author of "The White House," "The Veterans' Program," and most recently "Washington Cavalcade."

Other guest authors will be Agnes Sligh Turnbull ("The Bishop's Mantle"), Michael F. Reilly ("Reilly of The White House"), and James Warner Bellah ("Ward 20"). The luncheon will take place at the Hotel Statler. Tickets are on sale at book and department stores.

Cain to Push Modified Rent Control Bill

Washington Senator To Fight Extension Of Present Ceilings

By the United Press

Chairman Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) of the Senate Banking Subcommittee on Rent Controls, said yesterday he would fight proposals for a 30-day extension of present ceilings, and urge Congress to act instead on his law to continue modified controls for the next 14 months.

The existing rent law expires two weeks from yesterday. Both the House and Senate Banking Committees meet today to discuss suggestions from both Republican and Democratic leaders that the law be temporarily extended as is, to give Congress more time to watch economic developments stemming from the commodity market price break.

Cain, who returned today from a week-long trip to the Southwest, said he "sees no reason why we can't buckle down to work and come to terms on a regular rent bill" before February 29. He said he would lay before the committee tomorrow a bill still containing virtually all of the control relaxing features which stirred up a sharp controversy when he first outlined them to the full Banking Committee in a closed session early this month.

Cain said it was not true that the committee tossed the bill back to him for major revision. He said he had made only one important change, and that on his own initiative. This was elimination of a clause calling for decontrol of all rooming houses.

Body of Skier Buried Beneath Avalanche Found

Aspen, Colo., Feb. 15 (AP).—The body of Alexander McFadden, 32, Memphis, Tenn., industrialist, was found today 10 feet below the surface of a snow avalanche that buried him alive.

A physician said he had suffocated. His widow, the former Josephine Cutting of New York, received the news in the hotel here.

Yesterday, with Alexander Cushing of Glen Head, N. Y., and Morris Shepherd of Sharon, Mass., McFadden induced ski professional Percy Rideout to lead the party into Difficult Creek canyon. Rideout argued against the venture but the others insisted.

Cities Isolated

Floods Still Threaten in Some Areas

By The Associated Press

Floods prevalent in eight States after an excessive two-day rainfall were receding yesterday.

While practically all points along the rampaging rivers, fed by the rains and melting snows which preceded the rain, already have experienced crests from 6 to 12 feet above flood stages, higher readings were in sight for other places.

In Virginia, the James River continued to rise gradually, but threats of damaging floods were diminishing. A 14-foot crest was predicted for Richmond at noon today.

In West Virginia, Indiana and Mississippi, where a combined death toll of 15 was counted, the situation showed steady improvement. In Tennessee and Georgia, crests were forecast for early today.

Along the Cumberland River, several middle Tennessee cities were reported isolated as the swollen river approached a peak of

D. C. Weather To Stay Mild

Temperature Will Nudge 50 Today

Washington continued yesterday to get a preview of Spring. The sun shone brilliantly. The temperature stayed in the balmy 40's.

Today will be even milder, with moderate Southerly winds and temperatures near 50, according to the forecast; partly cloudy in the afternoon.

For the early morning, a low of about 30 is predicted in the city, and 25 in the suburbs, with skies mostly clear.

The weatherman called the turn on the weather again yesterday. He has erred only four times in calling the weather shots for the first 15 days of February, giving him an average of .733.

Yesterday's Springlike weather saw the mercury reach a high of 48 at 2:50 p. m. The low mark was 30 at 6:52 a. m. It wasn't Washington's warmest February 15. In 1909 the temperature reached 60. On February 15, 1899, the mercury dropped to six degrees below zero.

The warm weather caused flood

Arab 'D-Day' Fails to Bring Big Offensive

2 Bridges Blown Up, 20 Persons Killed in Palestine Violence

Jerusalem, Feb. 15 (AP).—An anticipated large-scale Arab attack in Palestine failed to take place today.

February 15 was the day mentioned by various Arab sources as D-Day for a big Arab offensive.

[The United Press said the Jewish extremist Stern Gang warned foreign consuls in Tel Aviv today, accusing some of them of "collaborating with Arabs and threatening to treat them as spies."]

Scattered violence throughout the Holy Land today brought the death toll since November 29, when partition was voted, to 1204.

Today's fighting brought death to 13 Arabs and seven Jews.

The incidents included the blowing up of two bridges near the Syrian border. Jewish sources said they were blasted by members of Hagana, the Jewish defense army. A number of houses in two Arab villages also were destroyed in the same area and police said 11 Arabs, including five children, were killed in one village.

Hagana sources said the buildings had harbored an Arab band. The same sources said the blasted bridges had "constantly been used by the Arab invader."

The villages attacked were Sasa and Tataba. The bridges were near Nablus and Metulla.

One Jew was killed when Arabs attacked motor traffic in southern Palestine, and two Jewish settlements also were attacked.

Shooting was heard in Jerusalem, Haifa, Tel Aviv and Jaffa.

Partition Group Report Approval Likely Today

Lake Success, Feb. 15 (AP).—A United Nations official tonight said the Palestine Partition Commission tomorrow may approve its special report to be made to the Security Council.

Reports have said the five members would recommend creation of a U. N. police force for the Holy Land work.

U. S., Britain Take Steps to Aid Germany

Ban on Making Aluminum Eased; Central Bank to Be Established

London, Feb. 15 (AP).—The United States and Britain announced two steps today to thaw the German economy.

These come only a few days before the London conference where the Bizonia powers will meet with France, over Russian protests, in a search for agreement on western Germany's future.

The first step is establishment of a central bank at Frankfurt, with a capital of $10,000,000. It will have authority to issue new currency if the United States and Britain decide on the action.

Step No. 2 is to let Bizonia Germans make aluminum, now prohibited as a war material, on a temporary basis.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States military governor, said he and the British decided to lift the aluminum ban in order to bolster the Germans' deficit economy.

Aluminum is one of 14 industries prohibited by the Allied Control Council. Clay said the Russians had not been informed of the action and they may protest.

The order provides that Bizonia plants may produce aluminum only from bauxite stocks on hand. In Berlin, Clay said the action "does not prejudice our decision that aluminum remains a prohibited industry for the future."

Western Allies to Meet Thursday on Merger

London, Feb. 15 (NYHT.).—The United States, Britain and France will meet here Thursday to confer on merging the French occupation zone in Germany with the Anglo-American bizonal administration. The talks are also expected to be a test for the prospects of the British sponsored "western union" of Europe.

Anglo-American policy toward western Germany is in general agreement. French policy, however, is so different that chances of any wide and significant agreement being reached in the talks are considered remote.

A Soviet protest against the conference is being ignored.

U. S. Ambassador Calls Parley on Freeing of Marines

Shanghai, Feb. 15 (AP).—United States Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart arranged an urgent conference in Nanking tomorrow with Admiral Charles M. Cooke, jr., on efforts to release four United States Marines held prisoner by Chinese Communists since Christmas Day.

Stuart cut short a Shanghai visit to return to Nanking to meet Cooke, who is flying in from Tsingtao, where he commands the United States Western Pacific Fleet.

Stuart said effective contact with the Communists was difficult because no direct liaison remained between them and nationalist China. The Communists are known to listen in on many Nationalist broadcasts, and Marine planes have been dropping leaflets in Communist areas, asking a rendezvous.

The Communist radio acknowledged only Friday that the missing Marines had been captured and that a fifth had been fatally wounded.

They were on a hunting trip north of Tsingtao at the time, but the Communist broadcast charged they were participating in the civil war. This is a standard accusation, made in all previous clashes between Communists and United States personnel.

Russia Faces Test on Austria

If Quibbling Starts U. S. to Quit Parley

Vienna, Feb. 15 (NYHT).—American delegation to the Austrian treaty conference in London next week will test Russia's interest in approving a pact as quickly as possible, it was learned tonight.

If the Soviet representatives quibble generally on further compromise on economic clauses and on general agreement on political provisions, the American representatives will reach for their hats and go home within three weeks.

The Russians will have to show they mean business this time, it was said.

Big stumbling block is Russia's insistence on extra-territoriality for former German assets the Soviet will hold after the treaty. The cash demand of 200 million dollars, Austrian and western Allied officials believe, can be whittled down by at least one third.

Chancellor Leopold Figl at Salzburg, said today that recent Russian "concessions" are "unacceptable." He was referring to the extra-territorial demand and to the 200-million-dollar Soviet figure.

The Austrian government will undertake a contribution campaign among the people to raise funds, Figl said, to pay off the Russians.

$2000 Stolen At Night Club

Police Told Thief Used Combination

A Sunday-morning sneakthief stole $2000 from a safe at the Club Cairo after using the combination to open the strong box.

Samuel Schanker, co-owner of the club at 1615 Q st. nw., said the money was two days' receipts. The thief entered, he said, between 2:30 a. m. and 10:30 a. m.

Schanker said that the money was in a compartment locked by a key, and that this compartment had been broken open. Another "burglar proof" compartment in which nothing of value was kept was not touched by the burglar, he said.

Schanker told police that five persons know the combination to the safe.

An armed holdup was reported to police by Robert D. Oglesby of 1913 G st. nw., who said he was held up by two men at about 8 p. m. at the point of a revolver and robbed of $18 while parking his car in the rear of 1906 G st. nw.

According to Pvt. William J. Boyle of the Third Precinct, both of the bandits were about 20 and hatless. One man, whose appearance was swarthy, was about 5 feet 10, 180 pounds, and had black,

Quadruplets Safely Delivered After X-Ray Foretold Event

Latrobe, Pa., Feb. 15 (AP).—Quadruplets—the birth that occurs only once in 650,000—were born today to the 26-year-old wife of a metal works inspector.

A boy and three girls, weighing a total of 13½ pounds, were born within five minutes to Mrs. Barbara Wagner Zavada. The babies, whose birth was forecast by X-rays last November, were delivered by Caesarean section.

Dr. J. Wiley Hartman said the quads and their blonde mother "seem to be doing fine."

"They're fairly big babies and should do all right," he added.

The first infant, a 3½ pound boy, arrived at 1:32 a. m. EST just 15 minutes after Mrs. Zavada was wheeled into the operating room at Latrobe General Hospital. Then came the three girls, weighing 3¾ pounds; 3¼ pounds and 3 pounds. Hartman said the girls were identical triplets, born of a single ovum or egg. The boy was born of another egg.

The young mother, who has a 5-year-old son by a previous marriage, was in labor six hours when physicians decided to operate. The babies were not due until April. In addition to Dr. Hartman, two Pittsburgh obstetricians and four local doctors attended her. The babies are in incubators now.

The dazed father, Andrew Zavada, 35, weakly mopped his brow and muttered, "I'm glad its over. I hope Barbara and the babies are all right."

Zavada, who makes $1.20 an hour as an inspector for the Latrobe Die Casting Co., said he wasn't worried about supporting his enlarged family.

'Ike' Offers Program For Peace, Security

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

GEN. Dwight D. Eisenhower yesterday presented the Nation with a double-barreled program for world peace and national security.

Reviewing the world situation in a farewell report, the retiring Army chief of staff declared that present American defenses are inadequate. To a series of recommendations to meet immediate conditions, he coupled a long-term plan to abolish war.

The former Army chief balanced the "credits" against the "debits" for continued world peace, and concluded there is "hope" but "no real assurance" of it. He warned that should the Mediterranean nations fall under Communist sway war "would be close to us."

Eisenhower's proposals for long-term American security were of particular interest. He rejected the view—common among military men—that "war is inevitable" because man by nature is "a war-making animal." Instead, he urged that the United States tackle the problem of abolishing war with the same vigor and methods that medical men used to stamp out plagues.

"A generation, or even a century, may pass before the nations in concert develop practical measures to banish war from international relations," he said. "But if men can learn only by repeated experience, the next war will surely be convincing."

Our long-term security program, said the Army leader turned college president, should involve:

1. Institution of courses on war in American schools. "The study of war, its causes and prevention," he said, "have a prominent place in public educational campaigns as well as our colleges."

2. American faith in the future of the United Nations. We should "be foremost in combatting pessimism" about its future," he declared, and recalled the trials American democracy went through in its early days.

3. Support of "every honest effort to reduce armaments." Unilateral disarmament on the part of the United States, however, would be "disastrous," Eisenhower emphasized.

Such a long-range program should be coupled with a short-term security plan based on military strength, he said. "Aggressive intent does not balk at war—it merely fears defeat," the general declared.

In his discussion of prospects for continued world peace, Eisenhower did not mention Russia or communism by name, but left no doubt about the forces he referred to.

"Our traditional friends in western Europe," he said, "are in straightened circumstances and some are threatened with strangulation by a militant political party whose obvious purpose it is to promote chaos and insurrection for the advantage of an alien ideology. Were those countries to give up the good fight for our common heritage of liberty and become the pawns of totalitarianism, America's security would be in dire danger.

"We would find ourselves facing across narrowing ocean and Arctic barriers a despotic colossus spread over and beyond the combined Eurasian territories of the Roman Empire, the Persia of antiquity, the Germanic Kings and the Mongol Khans . . .

"Naturally, we would prefer to

Wallace Assails Administration

Taft Heads for Washington, Encouraged by Western Tour

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) was on his way back to Washington last night from a six-State stumping tour while developments elsewhere kept the 1948 presidential pot boiling.

Taft, faced with a congressional fight on the program for long-term aid to Europe, said results of his campaign trip were "exteremly encouraging." Before leaving Denver, the chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee called for a congressional subcommittee to study renovation of the Nation's armed forces reserve system.

In New York, meanwhile, third party candidate Henry A. Wallace demanded the resignation of Army Secretary Royall and dismissal of two Cabinet officers. These were Defense Secretary Forrestal and Commerce Secretary Harriman.

Speaking at a rally of the Harlem Wallace-for-President Committee, the former New Deal Vice President charged that Royall "reaffirmed the basic policy of (racial) segregation" less than a week after President Truman had ordered an end to discrimination in the armed forces.

Forrestal, he declared, should be fired to demonstrate the President's "sincere devotion to the

Democrat Sees Racial Action At Convention

By the United Press

A "moderate" Southern Democratic Senator said yesterday that the real showdown on the racial issue within the Democratic Party will take place at the national convention in Philadelphia next July.

This Senator, who asked that he not be quoted by name, asserted that if no satisfactory "deal" is made at the convention, the threat of a Southern bolt from the national party may become a reality. The views of the Senator are regarded as significant because he has been predicting publicly that the party breach will be healed.

He said that as far as the Southerners are concerned, the important thing between now and the convention is for President Truman to soft-pedal the civil rights issue. This, it was reported, will be the Chief Executive's tack in his Jefferson-Jackson Day speech Thursday night.

This source, who is high in party political councils, differed with predictions by some other Southern Democrats that the Republicans would be able to impose a "gag rule" in the Senate to prevent a Southern filibuster from killing antilynching, antipoll tax and fair employment legislation. Thus, he predicted, the Democrats will go into their convention with none of the President's civil rights issues

School for North Fairlington Awaits Acquisition of Site

Plans for a school in North Fairlington appeared to be stymied yesterday while members of the Arlington School Board attempted to get rights to the property from the owners of the giant Fairlington housing project.

Erection of a school was approved by the board last October after a poll of area residents showed it was preferred to an addition to the present school in South Fairlington.

Barnard Joy, school board chairman, said yesterday that Superintendent of Schools Fletcher Kemp negotiated with a representative of the Fairmac Corp. of Dallas, Tex., present owners of the 3500-unit project, to obtain the land for a school site. William A. Zeigler, project manager, told Kemp a decision on the land would be made as soon as the owners Leo F. Corrigan and Leland Fikes, arrived in Washington.

"As far as we know," Joy declared yesterday, "the owners have not been in town."

Daniel Dugan, chairman of the Arlington County Board of Supervisors, said he believed the Fairmac Co. is "stalling," and does not want to turn the land over to the county.

"Land developers usually give land for schools, churches, and recreation areas here," Dugan explained. "Fairmac Co. are out-of-towners, and I don't think they have many of the interests of Arlington County at heart. They are just here for business."

"It's a fact that we're going to have to have a school there," he declared. "If the situation gets bad enough, we can condemn the

President To Report on Greek and Turkish Aid

Congress to Get Data Monday; Request for More Funds May Follow

By The Associated Press

President Truman will send to Congress tomorrow a report on the 400-million-dollar Greek-Turkish aid program. A request for additional money may follow shortly.

An official close to the Greek-Turkish situation, who reported this yesterday, said no amount has yet been specified.

The same official also predicted that Congress will receive the Administration's 570-million-dollar China-aid program during the week.

Repayment Plan Studied

Meanwhile, Administration advisers are studying a method to let the European aid countries repay borrowing under the plan on a "pay-as-able" basis.

They would send payments out of the excess of dollars they receive over and above the amount needed for current, essential imports. If no such excess of dollars develops, interest and principal payments would be scaled down or deferred.

The plan is being worked out by the staff of the National Advisory Council (NAC). It was disclosed privately by a member of the staff. He said it would be recommended to NAC for use in "appropriate cases."

Policy-Making Body

NAC is the Government's policy-making body for foreign lendings. Its membership includes Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, chairman; Secretary of State Marshall, Secretary of Commerce Harriman and others.

Some Republican legislators hold that food, fuel and fertilizer should be given outright. Machines and equipment, they argue, should be financed by "real loans," repayable out of earnings of the projects. Real loans imply a fixed schedule of interest and repayment.

Members of the NAC staff are prepared to, recommend a "flexible" type of loan under which the debtor country would pay what it can, without the alternative of defaulting entirely.

Free Speech Pops Hirohito's 'Pop' Out of Closet

Tokyo, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Japanese are taking advantage of their newly acquired freedom of speech to say openly what once was whispered—that Emperor Hirohito's father was eccentric, to say the least.

It even has come out that Emperor Kisho used to chase ladies of the court in a manner unbecoming a "son of heaven."

A Japanese magazine recalled today that Kisho succumbed to a brain disease. It also recalled the day the old Emperor rolled up an imperial rescript he was supposed to read to the diet and used it as a telescope to observe awe-struck deputies.

A soldier who formerly served in the imperial bodyguard, wrote how the Emperor released gold fish in rice paddies and chased them with child-like glee; how he arranged mirrors at the royal stables so he could see how he looked on horseback.

Chicago Housewife On 2-Week 'Fast' Over Living Costs

Chicago, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Mrs. Ruth Berbes, 22, ate three slices of bread and drank a glass of milk for her Sunday dinner today as she entered the fourth day of a two-week "fast" to protest the high cost of living.

"It will take more than a market slump to bring food prices down where they should be," she said. "Mohandas Gandhi got action by fasting, didn't he Anyway, I'm saving money."

Mrs. Berbes, housewife and soda fountain clerk, admired Gandhi. The day he died she paid $1.04 for a pound of butter. She began thinking about not eating high-priced foods.

Last Thursday noon she began her "fast." She weighed 122 pounds. Today she weighed 118.

She "fasts" on five slices of bread and a quart of milk a day, which cost about 30 cents.

Paul Reynaud

Paul Reynaud, the astute, decisive financial expert and former French Premier who yesterday passed off recent market fluctuations here as normal "price readjustments," is no amature in fiscal circles.

Reynaud

As a young man he joined his father in a lucrative dry goods business in Mexico, and returned to France to practice law and enter government service—serving successively as Minister of Colonies, Justice and Finance.

A month before the world stock market crash of 1929, he sold his holdings at the very peak, and advised his friends to do likewise. Five years later he shocked his countrymen by advocating franc devaluation, giving up the gold standard and introducing a flexible currency in accordance with the British pattern. Reynaud was also responsible for the Anglo-French financial accord of December 25, 1939.

On March 21, 1940, after the resignation of Daladier, the dapper little Frenchman who had often been mistaken while in the United States for the late Mayor Jimmy Walker, was appointed Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs.

He resigned June 16, 1940, after refusing to surrender to the Nazis, and three months later was arrested and imprisoned by the Vichy government.

In recent months Reynaud has been attempting to form a "third force" of Socialists, Popular Republicans, Radical Socialists and Independents to combat both the Communists on the left and Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Rally of the French People on the right.

Romulo Gallegos

Venezuela's newly inaugurated President, Romulo Gallegos, is an internationally known writer, poet and educator.

He is author of a large number of realistic novels on life in his country. The best known of these novels is "Dona Barbara," written in 1928.

"Dona Barbara" and two other novels, "Cantaclaro" and "Canaima," have been filmed by Mexican companies.

Born in Caracas, Venezuela, on August 2, 1884, President Gallegos began his career as a teacher in the high schools of Venezuela. During three months of 1936 he was Minister of Public Instruction.

He was elected deputy to the National Congress for the federal district between 1937 and 1940.

During this period he was advanced as an opposition candidate for the presidency. But—and it was no surprise, as the election was by the government-controlled national legislature with no popular vote—Mr. Gallegos was defeated by General Medina.

He is president and founder of the Democratic Action (Socialist) Party, which came into power with the overthrow of General Medina in 1945.

Robert W. Kenny

Robert W. Kenny of Los Angeles, who spoke last night before the National Youth Assembly against Universal Military Training, is spearheading the Wallace—for - President movement in the West.

Kenny

"If we offer voters in 1948 a race between reactionary Democrats and reactionary Republicans, they will yawn and go to the movies instead of the polls," he insists.

Kenny, national chairman of the Progressive Citizens of America and president of the National Lawyers Guild, was born in California in 1901. On graduating from Stanford he worked for the United Press for three years in San Francisco, London and Los Angeles, and briefly for the Chicago Tribune in Paris.

After studying law in his spare time he was admitted to the California bar in 1926. He has since practiced in Los Angeles, working up from municipal judge, Superior Court judge and State Senator to attorney general (1943-1947).

As counsel for 19 subpenaed witnesses befort the House Un-American Activities Committee last fall, he advised them not to answer questions as to whether or not they were Communists, maintaining that the right of a secret ballot is guaranteed in the United States.

When asked recently if he had ever said any "harsh" words about Russia, Kenny's answer was, "Well, no, there are plenty of experts doing that already."

Abba Hillel Silver

Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, who has been working for "causes" ever since his graduation from the University of Cincinnati in 1915, in his first public appearance since returning from Palestine a few days ago to sparkplug American support for Jews there, did his part for the cause at the Jewish Community Center last night.

Dr. Silver

The Lithuanian-born rabbi, who celebrated his fifty-fifth birthday January 28, spoke as chairman of the American Section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine and head of the American Zionist Emergency Council.

He has been spiritual head of the Temple in Cleveland since 1917, taken an active part in Jewish, nonsectarian civic and philanthropic activities, and is a member of more organizations than you can shake a stick at. He has also found time to write several books.

It is his belief that the Palestine problem is the test of the United Nations' effectiveness.

James C. Auchincloss

Republican Representative James Coats Auchincloss of New Jersey, whose home rule bill for the District has roused the hope of many a Washington citizen, knows what it is to legislate and administer fairs.

Auchincloss

This 62-year-old champion of locally-elected councilmen served for eight years on the council of the borough of Rumson, N. J., and was serving his third term as mayor when elected to Congress in November, 1942.

Befor getting into politics, he had a varied experience—as a bank employe, broker with 18 years on the Board of Governors of the New York Stock Exchange, World War I military intelligence captain, and founder, treasurer, president and chairman of the board of the New York Better Business Bureau.

Besides all this, he was once a New York City deputy police commissioner.

One of eight children, Auchincloss was married in 1901. His two sons have made him a four-time grandfather. He received his education at Groton and Yale. He was graduated from Yale in 1908 with an A.B. degree.

School Asks Addition

Luray, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—A request for four to six additional rooms for Stanley High School was presented at the Page County Board of Supervisors' meeting last week. In addition, the board received requests from the Andrew Jackson School in West Luray for additional improvements.

land and force them to sell at the condemnation price. That would have to go through the courts and would be a long-drawn-out process."

Dugan said Fairmac could sell the land to the county but the firm had not made any offers.

The school board head explained that when the housing development was under control of the Defense Homes Corporation, a tract at Abingdon st., near 30th st. S., had been set aside for a school site. The deed for the S. Fairlington School was turned over to the county, he said, but the deed for the additional school site was not executed.

Joy said he believed the failure of Defense Homes to turn over the land was due to "a series of circumstances" and was an oversight rather than intentional.

"We have been working on the problem constantly," he said, "but are bogged down on the site situation. We can't get an architect to work until the site is cleared."

In his recommendations to the school board last month, Kemp called for a 14-room school on a four-acre site at a cost of $441,000. Construction funds are to come from a $1,776,000 school bond issue voted last May.

Charles E. V. Prins, public relations representative for Fairmac, said he had been unable to reach Ziegler for comment on the matter. Prins said he and David Krooth, counsel for the company, did not know anything about the issue, and added that the owners were still out of town.

the price drop made extension of the price support program another year more important than ever. Capper attributed the market break to improved crop prospects here and abroad and slackening of Government buying for export.

To Studying Request

The committee is studying Anderson's request for power to regulate margins on commodity markets. Witnesses for the Chicago Board of Trade were scheduled to appear today in opposition to this proposal.

From Chicago the United Press reported substantial decreases in over-the-counter prices of many food items in the past 30 days. The report added that a survey indicated still further reductions in some items were due today.

The survey, covering 16 cities, showed flour leading the downward parade with a 13-cent drop in price for a 10-pound sack, while butter declined 6 cents a pound, lard 7 cents, T-bone steak 8 cents and eggs 8 cents a dozen.

same situation and they made out okay. I will too," he said.

The entire staff of the Latrobe Hospital was mobilized for the event.

"I carried out the first boy and the last girl," said Nurse Gerda Townsend. "It was my first experience with quadruplets—and I hope the last. It's just too exciting."

A half hour after their birth, Father Theodore Hodobay of St. Mary's Greek Catholic Church christened the babies John Michael, Bernadette Elizabeth, Barbara Rose and Anna Mary.

Mrs. Zavada's parents were jubilant.

"I wanted four girls and I got almost what I wanted," grinned Grandfather Ralph Wagner, 59.

His wife, Rose, 52, chimed in, "Well, I wanted the boy."

Young Larry Dale McBryar, who had waited eagerly for his mother to bring him "two brothers and two sisters," was fast asleep in the family's modest five-room house in nearby Dorothy, a mining village.

JALOPY PROBLEM—Jimmy Shipe, 12, watches as his brother, Kendall, 16, ponders over a mechanical problem on his jalopy, in the garage at their home at 3700 33d pl. nw. The car and Kendall are the same age

Boy Rebuilds Automobile Old as He Is

Sixteen years after a Pontiac rolled off the assembly line and a boy was born they got together, but as a unit they have yet to go very far.

Kendall Shipe, 16, of 3700 33d pl. nw., bought the venerable car for $80 last summer from a grocery clerk in the neighborhood, determinedly pushed it home, and set to work with the wrenches.

Kendall's father, Archie K. Shipe, an attorney, took a tired view of the purchase, especially when the car got stuck and blocked entrance of the family Lincoln to the garage for a month.

Kendall's three older sisters also had some frivolous remarks about the immobile-auto, but sisters will be sisters.

The boy next door, John Downing, also 16 and without previous mechanical experience, joined Kendall in tearing down the engine, rebuilding it, and in a hundred other tinkerings.

Kendall's brother, Jimmie, 12, a Washington Post carrier, indulgently "banker'd" much of the approximately $50 required for parts from time to time.

To date, six months since purchase, Kendall and John have managed to drive the car around the block several times. At the moment the car is in repose again, however.

"The clutch plate they sold me wasn't any good," Kendall explains, "and I am waiting for a new one from Detroit."

If it arrives in time, Kendall and John plan to drive to Kansas City, Mo., during Easter vacation to visit relatives. If not, they plan to go this summer.

enacted into law. And that, he added, would clear the way for a satisfactory solution.

The showdown, he said, will come over the drafting of the party's racial plank in its campaign platform. If the Southerners are fully consulted and their views given consideration, he said, the plank can be drafted satisfactorily.

The essence of such an agreement, he said, would be that the party is not committed to passage of specific racial legislation.

U. N. decision on Palestine." He said Harriman should go as evidence the President "means what he says when he speaks of civil liberties."

"Let's not be foolish," Wallace cautioned, however. "Let's not try holding our breath while waiting for such action. I find little to be hoped for as a result of the President's recent message to the Congress. There is little reason to expect action. I know—yes, I have first-hand knowledge—that a Cabinet officer does not differ publicly with the dominant policy of the Administration and remain in office."

Later, addressing an American Labor Party rally in the Bronx, Wallace said Democartic suggestions that he drop his third party candidacy were made "because the Democratic high command in Washington is scared to death." Last week Democratic Mayor William O'Dwyer, speaking in the same hall, called on Wallace to end his campaign and return to the Democratic fold.

Even while Wallace spoke, determined resistance to his candidacy was mounting within the ranks of organized labor and of the Democratic Party, both of which a few years ago hailed him as their champion.

CIO News Prepares Attack

The CIO News, organ of industrial unionism, will charge today that Wallace preaches liberalism but fails to practice it. Under the signature of Allan L. Swim, CIO News editor, the union's attack on Wallace will be opened in this vein:

"He served as Secretary of Agriculture, Vice President and Secretary of Commerce. In none of these posts did he distinguish himself as a champion of the things for which labor is fihting. CIO officials who called on him for aid learned to regard him as a "preaching liberal'—not a 'practicing liberal'".

Wallace's "first contribution" to election of a "progressive Congress" in 1948, Swim will say, was to split from the body of CIO "officers of unions representing about one-sixth" of its membership.

Berle Hits at Wallace

The Politicl Action Committee of the CIO, meanwhile, has announced its intention of turning out six million votes toward defeat in the November elections of Congressmen who voted for the Taft-Hartley Act. The American Federation of Labor and other labor organizations were charting similar campaigns.

In line with the CIO's attack on Wallace, Adolf A. Berle, Assistant Secretaory of State under the New Deal, charged yesterday that the third party candidate was "a front for international intrigue." His policies, Berle said, would lead the United States into war.

"Wallace claims to be for peace," Berle said in a New York radio talk, "but so did Chamberlain in England when he appeased Hitler and thereby brought on World War II. How often do we have to learn that appeasement means war? Wallace's 'peace in our time' is just what Chamberlain promised Britain, and the result will be the same."

GOP Having Trouble

Nor was everything rosy in the Republican camp. While Taft was on his way back to Washington to fight the Marshall Plan, the status of Pennsylvania's delegation to the coming GOP national convention was clouded by Gov. James H. Duff's all-out indorsement of the plan. Senator Martin (R., Pa.) only a few days before had been highly critical of the aid program.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, another Republican candidate, has expressed views on the Marshall Plan closely paralleling those of Taft. On the other hand, Candidate Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor, regards the plan more nearly as Duff does. As a result, Pennsylvania's 73-man delegation is now in what Duff described as a "cold war."

While Taft, finished with a whirlwind tour of Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa and Colorado, declined to guess how much strength he had in the six States, he said he was satisfied. He said many delegates might go uninstructed to the convention but he hoped to share strongly in their votes after "favorite son" voting was over.

Eisenhower Offers Program For World Peace, U.S. Security

discount the likelihood of such grave developments. But we can safely do so only insofar as we combat conditions that might lead to them. To reduce their likelihood is the purpose of our present foreign policy in such critical areas as the Mediterranean. There we are supporting nations whose continued independence helps assure free communication and commerce between other independent nations. If this oldest corridor between the East and West were walled up, the effects would be instant and catastrophic . . . War, in such case, would be close to us.

"Conditions today are sufficiently turbulent, however, that war might be visited upon the world without the impetus of planning or deliberate policy. One isolated action might precipitate conflict."

On the credit side, Eisenhower listed first America's unparalleled industrial economy, which he said would make us the favorite in any future conflict. He also mentioned the "stabilizing influence" of our ties with the British Commonwealth, and the democracies of western Europe and Latin America, our development of atomic fission, the existence of the United Nations and our control of the seas.

Eisenhower finds many chinks in our present defenses. The Army, he says, "is not ready to respond to an emergency call because its global distribution not only leaves it weak in every sector but prevents the concentration of anything beyond the merest handful for possible tactical use."

Specific Recommendations

These specific recommendations were made by the former Army chief:

1. Enact legislation now providing for total mobilization of men, plants and materials in time of war.

2. Build up our world intelligence system and expand the information and broadcasting program of the State Department.

3. Balanced defense forces are essential. Introduction of the airplane and atomic bomb "has no more eliminated the need" for the foot-soldier "than did the first use of cavalry or the discovery of gunpowder." The ground soldier, he said, still is the "keystone of armed effort." Maintenance of a Navy to control the world's ocean also is vital, he declared.

4. We must concentrate on designing new equipment for the Army which can be transported by air. The present forces are underequipped with modern weapons. We must start producing new recoilless guns, Arctic equipment, armored personnel carriers, new anti-aircraft range finders and fire control systems, and tanks with integrated radar and fire control.

5. Regular Army, National Guard and Reserves are far short of the 1,300,000-man force which must be ready on mobilization day. Universal military training is the answer to this problem.

6. Further unification of the armed services is essential. We should select a group of able officers from all services each year and commission them in the armed forces.

6. We must create a civil defense organization under civilian control.

Bankruptcy Near, Says London Paper

Busbey Demand

'Truth' Asked On Nazi-Red U-Boat Deal

By The Associated Press

Representative Busbey (R., Ill.) demanded "the whole truth" yesterday on how Nazi submarine raiders were able to operate from a Russian base in 1939-40.

Specifically, he asked that the State Department print the full text of any secret Nazi-Soviet agreements permitting German use of the Port of Murmansk, saying:

"The hundreds of American ships and thousands of American lives lost as the result of the use of Murmansk are a reminder of the infamy of the Soviet Union during the period when the United States was the arsenal of democracy."

Secret Documents

Busbey noted that two weeks ago the State Department released secret German-Russian documents covering relations before Hitler attacked the Soviet. He asked: "Why were not all of the important documents released instead of only a very carefully selected few?"

Michael J. McDermott, State Department press officer, told a reporter: "We made public what we found." He added that the department discovered a reference to the use of Murmansk and published that. McDermott said it is possible that a pact itself may turn up some day.

Published Reference

The published reference to Murmansk was a German "state secret" telegram of September 5, 1940. It said:

"The navy intends to abandon the base on the Murman coast, as such are now available in Norway. Please inform the Russians of this decision and, on behalf of the government of the Reich, convey our thanks for valuable assistance. In addition to the official note, the commander-in-chief of the navy intends also to express his gratitude in a personal letter to the commander-in-chief of the Soviet navy. Therefore, please wire when notification has been made."

Hard Work and Hard Living Seen Only Salvation

Britain faces bankruptcy.

So says the London publication, The Economist, in the leading article of its February 14th issue. The article is entitled: "On the Rocks."

By midsummer at present rate of expenditure, Britain will have exhausted its remaining reserves of about 600 million pounds, The Economist says.

"After that, it will just be impossible to buy either the food or the raw materials which are necessary for Britain to eat and work," declares The Economist. "The aspect of starvation and mass unemployment is now alarmingly close."

Based on White Paper

The Economist bases its prediction on figures in the latest British white paper.

The publication declares the outlook is not encouraging even with Marshall Plan aid.

Britain, it said, used previous loans to live and to spend on a scale which was quite out of accord with Britain's real economic position.

"And what guarantee is there that the Marshall Plan may not be used in the same way?" it asks.

The Economist declares American and other loans have served to mask from the government and the people alike the country's true economic straits.

Hard Work Urged

It advocates that Britain begin now to pursue the policy it would pursue if the Marshall Plan were reduced to a half or a third and to use the "surplus" thus created to build up reserves, modernize industry, develop economic ingration in western Europe and undertake now the program of hard living and hard working "in which in the long run salvation alone will lie."

Britain, the paper declares, has been cradled in illusions since 1945. If it had realized the situation then, as had Poland, it might have set to work as the Poles have done.

The reality is of a nation in its worst economic straits since the Napoleonic wars, The Economist declars.

Yet unions press for more wages for fewer hours while the controls and restrictions, it says.

World Was Blamed

"Britain has been living like an improvident family which, failing to make both ends meet, first spends the accumulated capital of the past, then borrows from friends—and when their loans are exhausted, begins to pawn the furniture," the publication says.

The publication blames Britain's plight mostly on the fact it was the only Allied power to fight both world wars from first day to the last.

The solution to Britain's problem, The Economist says, is the same as that faced by any family facing bankruptcy—either it goes under to a life of perpetual makeshift and pauperism, or it restores its solvency by vigorous action—by buying less, by cutting down every kind of expense and by straining every nerve to sell more of its goods and services.

Economies Proposed

Bankruptcy is a family responsibility, The Economist declares, and no section of the community can avoid its hardships.

Longer hours and more output at the same wages, heavier taxes or limitation of profits, sterner rationing of coal, cuts in overseas spending, slashes in the armed forces, cutting down of government employes by one fourth and cutbacks in capital spending for schools, hospitals and housing are among the economies advocated by The Economist.

Italy Watches City Election For Vote Trend

Rome, Feb. 15 (AP).—Italian politicians watched a small local election today for a possible tip-off on how the country will vote in the coming national election.

Pescara, Adriatic coastal city of 50,000 voted today in Italy's only municipal election between now and April 18 when Italy will elect its first parliament.

Premier Alcide de Gasperi said today that threats of direct action caused him to remove the Communist Party from his government last May.

He addressed 10,000 Christian Democratic youths attending a regional Congress.

De Gasperi said if Italy had been able to confront difficult moments it was due to American help.

"It is not possible," he added, "to accuse America of imperialism and enslavement."

U. S. General Joins Greek Defense Body

Athens, Feb. 15 (AP).—An American general has become a member of the Greek National Defense Council.

He is Maj. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, who is coming to Greece to head the United States military groups. As a member of the council he will have a voice in the fight against the Greek guerillas and composition of the Army.

Gen. Van Fleet

Gen. Van Fleet has been named commander of all United States Army, Navy and Air Forces assigned to the Greek mission. Maj. Gen. William G. Livesay, head of the United States Military Mission, will retain over-all command but will concentrate chiefly on problems of military supply.

U. S., British Join Council

Previously they were only observers at the council, which directs the war against the guerillas.

An announcement issued after a two-hour meeting between the heads of the Greek government and United States and British diplomatic officials said "a clear definition of relationships between the Greek government and the American and British missions" was agreed upon.

The step was seen as preventing further political moves such as the recent resignation of Lieut. Gen. Constantine Ventiris as commander of Greece's northern army.

Both Maj. Gen. S. B. Rawlins, the British military chief, and General Livesay, protested acceptance of Ventris' resignation. They described him as "the best soldier in Greece."

Premier Themistokles Sophoulis and Vice Premier Constantin Tsaldaris refused to consider the protests, saying Ventiris' resignation had already been accepted.

Dwight Griswold, administrator of the American Mission will attend council meetings, but as an observer.

American and British representation on the council will be equal.

The British representative will be Maj. Gen. E. E. Downs, commander of British troops in Greece who will become chief also of the British military training mission. Gen. Rawlins has been reassigned to London.

A dispatch from Ionnina said Markos Vafiades, the Greek guerilla leader, had visited Delvinaki in northwest Greece in connection with his efforts to establish a Communist government there.

Another dispatch said 27 bodies of men and women executed by rebels were found in the area of Delvinaki.

Market Slump Won't Spread, Reynaud Says

Paris, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Paul Reynaud, French financial expert and former Premier, who predicted the 1929 stock market crash one month before it happened, said today the present slump in the United States is a crisis of price readjustments and will not flame into world depression. (See People in the News, page 2.)

"I believe the slump in grain and other prices is purely an American crisis," he said. "It's a question of price readjustment, due without doubt to the announcements of good harvests in the two American continents, in Australia and Europe and perhaps also to a reduction in the amount of credits originally envisaged for European recovery under the Marshall Plan."

Reynaud said he did not think the present slump in United States prices was the beginning of another 1929, because production has not caught up with demand.

British Prepare To Quit North China

'Unsettled Conditions' Advanced as Reason for Moving Subjects to Shanghai

Nanking, Feb. 15 (AP).—British Nationals in a vast area of North China today were asked to register for possible evacuation because of "unsettled conditions."

Ambassador Ralph Stevenson said the request applies to all Britons residing north of the Yangtze River and east of the Siking-Hankow line. Nationalist and Communist armies are vying for control in much of this area.

British consulates "suggested" all nonessential Britons move from "exposed areas" of North China to Shanghai.

Stevenson explained that since Britain surrendered her extra-territoriality in China in 1943, Britons must depend upon the Chinese government for protection.

The action parallels warnings previously sounded by the United States Embassy for misisonaries and other United States nationals in North China.

Siam Reported Rushing Troops South to Malay Unrest Area

Singapore, Malaya, Feb. 15 (AP).—The Straits Times today said the Siamese army was rushing reinforcements to four southern Siamese provinces because of a "grave situation" among the Malay minority of 700,000.

The dispatch, written from Kuala Lumpur, capital of the Malayan federation, said it was believed there "the troops were dispatched as a police measure . . . The Siamese probably are attempting to quash any possibility of revolt, although a revolt seems highly improbable."

The article said latest reports indicated reinforced Siamese army forces had taken up positions along the Siamese-Malayan border.

The paper described the Malays in south Siam as being "in a state of continual suspense and fear," especially the Moslems. Many refugees, it said, have been crossing into British Malaya since January 16. Malay nationalists have been accusing Siamese of persecution."

Tojo Expects To Be Hanged, Observers Say

Tokyo, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Former Premier Hideki Tojo expects to receive the death sentence when the Allied tribunal completes the trial of Japanese war lords about May 1.

Observers generally agree he will be hanged, and point to the following:

1. Tojo has picked his posthumous name—a Japanese Buddhist custom usually carried out shortly before death.

2. He committed "mental harakiri" by assuming full responsibility for his war acts as premier.

3. He is making notes for what most Japanese believe will be his memoirs to provide funds for his family.

Japanese say Tojo "died" when he attempted suicide at the beginning of the occupation and bungled it.

CIO Today Maps Demands on Steel

Pittsburgh, Feb. 15 (AP).—Top officials of the CIO United Steelworkers meet here tomorrow with their chief, Philip Murray, to map new wage demands on the steel industries.

The union says its 850,000 members now earn an average of $1.54 an hour. Recently the United States Steel Corp. said average weekly earnings among its production employes stood at $61.34 as of October 1947—a little better than $1.53 an hour.

Present contracts with all major steel producers permit wage clauses to be reopened April 1, 1948, although the pacts do not expire until the spring of 1949.

Cardinal Pignatelli, 96, Dying; Unconscious in Vatican City

Vatican City, Feb. 15 (AP).—Gennaro Cardinal Granito Pignatelli, Dean of the College of Cardinals, was reported dying tonight. His physician said he might not live until morning.

Cardinal Pignatelli

The Cardinal, 96, is second only to Pope Pius XII in the Roman Catholic hierarchy. His death would reduce the College of Cardinals to 60.

Cardinal Pignatelli was stricken with a bladder ailment last week. He was clear of mind and drank some coffee this morning, but lapsed into unconsciousness tonight when his strength began ebbing.

The prelate is Prince of Belmonte and a member of the Italian aristocracy. He was educated at the Jesuit school at Mondragone. He attributed his call to the priesthood at 28 to a monk, Guglielmo San Felice, who later became cardinal. After his ordination he served as secretary to the man who had converted him and then began a career in the Vatican diplomatic service.

He first served in France, where relations with the Vatican were strained because of the French denunciation of the Napoleonic Concordat. He was made an Archbishop in 1899 and in 1904 went as Nuncio to Vienna. He was made cardinal at the Consistory of November 27, 1911. Since 1944 he has been the only survivor of those raised to the purple by Pius X.

He became dean of the cardinals and was made Bishop of Ostia in 1930 upon the death of Vincent Cardinal Vannutelli.

Training Opened To Disabled Vets

By The Associated Press

The Veterans' Administration has decided that work is the best medicine. It therefore opened its vocational rehabilitation program to all seriously disabled war veterans yesterday.

Previously, many were barred from the training because they were not well enough or strong enough to carry a full-time work schedule.

Under new regulations any seriously disabled veteran may take as many hours of training a day as the VA medical consultant says he can stand.

Leopold Aide Says King Will Not Abdicate

Brussels, Belgium, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Leopold 3d, 46, self-exiled King of the Belgians, will not abdicate unless asked to by his people, a high authority said today.

The informant, who asked to remain anonymous, is one of the highest personalities in royal circles and for years handled Leopold's private affairs.

"The rumor that when the King returns from his present trip to the Western Hemisphere, he will abdicate and then let his son and heir, Prince Baudouin, return to Belgium to ascend the throne is false," the informant said.

Leopold's political enemies have accused him of collaboration with Hitler and oppose his return to the throne. The King is willing to return to Belgium, but only if his name is cleared. He and his family have been in exile in Switzerland and now are visiting Cuba. They plan to go to the United States later.

Holy Land Partition Plea Sounded Here

More Decisive U. S. Support Is Urged Before 800 at Zionist Mass Meeting

Three speakers last night called for more decisive American support of the United Nations5 Palestine partition plan at an American Zionist Emergency Council-sponsored mass meeting here.

Dr. Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, chairman of the council and of the American section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, told nearly 800 persons at the meeting in the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw., that opponents of parttiion have "mobolized for a last determined attack."

Representative Franklin J. Maloney (R., Pa.), member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Representative John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), House minority whip, charged that the United States was standing by while the British and Arbas negated the U. N.'s intent.

Pronounced Failupe, He Says

Dr. Silver said, "Though the plan has not yet been in operation, and even the preliminary steps have not been taken, it is loudly pronounced a failure."

Declaring that the Arab had been successful through the years in forcing revisions of international decisions by threats and violence, Dr. Silver said it now remains to see whether "those who voted for the plan will yield to intimidation and threat, or will rally to maintain the authority of the U. N. and insure its implementation."

Representative McCormack said a powerful anti-partition alliance is now engaged in a war, partly declared and partly undeclared, in which Arab potentates encourage anti-Jewish riots in their own lands and supply money, arms and manpower for attacks on Jewish Palestine. Great Britain at Lake Success, he added slows down the U. N. hamstrings Jewish defense forces in Palestine and supplies arms to the Arab states.

He asserted that "certain big oil interests in America" were also members of this alliance to make their profits secure.

Assails Arms Embargo

Representative McCormack said the American embargo on arms for the Middle East prevented the Jews from arming, while Britain continued to ship arms to the Arabs.

"The embargo in this form must go," he said, and United States delegates to the U. N. should demand that no member state be allowed to sabotage the international verdict.

Representative Maloney declared that "essentially the responsibility for what is going on in Palestine rests with Great Britain," and that because armed groups had invaded Palestine from Syria, the Lebanon and Trans-Jordan it "is international aggression."

Dr. Emanuel Neumann of New York, president of the Zionist Organization of America, presided at the meeting, a highlight of the two-day conference being attended by delegates from 35 States. The conference will end today.

Ga. U. Reaction On Negro Plan

Athens, Ga., Feb. 15 (AP).—A suggestion that admission of Negroes to the University of Georgia is the only "ultimate solution" of the South's higher education problem brought mixed reaction from students yesterday. The suggestion was made by Student Editor George McArthur in the Red and Black, university weekly.

A majority said they do not favor the idea. A minority praised McArthur's views.

Chancellor Raymond R. Paty had no comment. Pope Brock, chairman of the State Board of Regents, said "the editorial does not reflect the policy of the Board of Regents at this time."

wavy hair. He was wearing a light camelhair sport jacket.

The second thug, of slender build, was described as about 6 feet tall, 160 pounds, with blond hair. He wore a gray covert cloth topcoat.

In other thefts reported to police yesterday, Mary E. Allen, 2515 K st. nw., said she was thrown to the ground by a man while walking in front of her home. He took her purse containing $3 and two rings, one valued at $450 and another at $200.

A theft "sometime within the last month" of two rings was reported yesterday by Mrs. Eve C. Jacobs, 2604 29th st. se. She said one of the rings was valued at $500, while a wedding band stolen was worth $100.

Nonpartisan Elections

Although the movement to give Arlington County nonpartisan elections has the backing of a wide variety of civic groups, it is now being stymied by the failure of Arlington representatives to introduce the bill in the Virginia General Assembly. The reason generally given for this stalling is the fear that the bill is unconstitutional. This fear, whether its basis is in genuine doubt or in convenient fancy, is one which does not seem to be shared by other Virginia communities. Nonpartisan elections have been the rule in Norfolk, Suffolk and other cities for some years and their constitutionality has not been questioned. Indeed, the House of Delegates has just passed a new charter granting such a reform in Richmond. It is difficult to see how Arlington's status as an urban area under a county manager makes it essentially different from these municipalities.

Actually, there is ground for suspicion that the only fear involved is the fear of old-line Arlington political organizations, notably the Democratic committee which has opposed the bill, that nonpartisan elections would loose their grasp on county offices. That is scarcely a commendable reason to thwart consideration of the measure, especially since the proposal contains a provision for a popular referendum before any change could take effect. In other words, what the bill would do is make the people the arbiter of election procedure.

Nonpartisan elections are of especial significance in Arlington County because of the fact that more than 50 per cent of the employed persons living in the county work for the Government and hence come under Hatch Act restrictions on political activity. This last year, by general agreement, elections for both the County Board and the School Board were nonpartisan. This agreement, however, is a flimsy truce, and there are now signs that it may be broken. Not only would permanent nonpartisan primary and general elections broaden the pool of potential talent available for local offices, they also would put the stress on selection of candidates on the basis of personal qualifications rather than party affiliation. Moreover, they would result in confining campaigns to the pertinent local issues on which State and national party platforms are meaningless.

The nonpartisan election bill is the product of a joint legislative committee composed of representatives of 17 Arlington organizations. It has been indorsed by such groups as the County Board, the School Board, the Civic Federation, the League of Women Voters, the Better Government League and various parent-teacher associations. This range of support indicates wide popular approval of the objectives. Surely, unless their purpose is actually to dampen the awakened public interest essential to alert government, the least the Arlington representatives can do it to press the measure vigorously in the Assembly, so that the people of Arlington may have the chance to decide the matter for themselves.

Fruitful Interchange

The forthcoming conferences arranged by the President's Council of Economic Advisers with representatives of organized industry, labor, farmer and consumer groups will, no doubt, devote a good deal of time to discussion of current price declines. However, the call for these meetings went out before the break in grain prices had become front page news, in accordance with council plans for establishing friendly contacts with private agencies and organizations to assist its own work of analysis and interpretation of economic developments.

We think it is an excellent idea for the council to invite private citizens to gather around the conference table to discuss their problems and work in concert to formulate policies for future guidance. There is a wealth of immensely valuable statistical and analytical material in the possession of fact-gathering private agencies that the council can use to great advantage to supplement the material drawn from Government sources. And the council in turn may have suggestions that will encourage more objective reporting and analysis by private agencies. But best of all is the mutually stimulating effect of a frank exchange of views.

Unhappily, opportunities for friendly contacts of this sort are all too few. People journey to Washington to make special appeals to Congress, to protest against legislation affecting their interests and to raise objections to regulations of administrative agencies. Or they enter conferences with Government officials in the wary mood of those who are prepared to resist unwelcome appeals or demands. The Advisory Council, on the other hand, is not asking anything except facts and opinions for testing the soundness of its own conclusions. In seeking out men and women with intimate knowledge of various aspects of economic activity gained through practical experiences, it is enlarging its own horizons, and at the same time helping to break down the artificial barriers that so often prevent free intercourse between the people and their representatives in the Government service.

Legislative Budget

Last year the legislative budget plan was launched under very unfavorable auspices. The Republicans had just obtained control of Congress and were pressed for time in presenting their budget estimates by February 15. In the end the House and Senate were unable to agree on a figure for proposed over-all expenditure cuts, and the legislative budget died in confrence. To this day the actual amount of savings effected by Congress is in dispute. In any case it fell far short of the objectives set by the Budget Committee and the even lower figure on which the Senate insisted.

This year the committee completed its work somewhat ahead of the deadline. It recommended reductions of 2.5 billion dollars in the President's budgeted over-all expenditures for the next fiscal year and has raised his estimates of receipts by 2.8 billions. The net result is the emergence of an estimated surplus for 1948-49 of 10.1 billion instead of the 4.8 billion surplus of the executive budget. Again the committee is handicapped by the February deadline; and particularly by its lack of knowledge of the cost of the foreign-aid program. Consequently, estimates of expenditures are necessarily highly provisional. Moreover, the unstable price situation increases the difficulty of forecasting revenue returns months ahead of collection.

In spite of these defects, the idea behind the legislative budget is excellent. For it is designed to give Congress a comprehensive picture of the budgetary situation as a whole before it takes up individual appropriation bills. Such a survey encourages a better-balanced scheme of expenditures and by emphasizing the importance of relating total expenditures to available means of payment offers a positive inducement to economy. One of the gravest threats to survival of the legislative budget has come from the efforts of the Republicans to use it as a political weapon to gain support for a tax-reduction program. But that situation, too, has been an outgrowth of an unusual political setup that will not long continue.

As time goes on the Budget Committee should be able to acquire the experience and knowledge required for an expert job of forecasting and revising executive budget estimates. At present it is badly hampered for lack of an adequate research staff. With such a staff to carry on work throughout the year, the preparation of the legislative budget would be greatly simplified and expedited. And if the date for presentation of estimates were postponed (possibly until March 15), the Budget Committee would have more data on spending programs and could offer more detailed suggestions as to where and how to effect savings. At present the legislative budget is still in its crude formative stage. But since even its critics admit the need for greater over-all control of fiscal policy by Congress, there is good reason to hope that defects of procedure will eventually be remedied and the legislative budget become a highly useful regulatory device. We are pleased to note that a movement toward this end is already under way in the Senate.

Tax Guessing Game

The current drop in prices has provoked lively discussion as to the effect of falling prices on tax-reduction programs. We cannot tell as yet whether the current declines in grain and food prices will result in a substantial lowering of the general price level. We may be at the beginning of a downward price movement of substantial proportions. Or there may be a reaction that would start prices on the upgrade again. Under the circumstances it would be rash to enact a tax-reduction program of the size approved by the House on the assumption that taxable incomes would be maintained at the high levels prevailing just prior to the price break. Because of that assumption, estimates of revenue were raised and the Ways and Means Committee was persuaded that the budget surplus for the coming fiscal year would be large enough to justify a tax cut of 6.5 billion dollars.

Of course, it can be argued that if prices really drop substantially, expenditures can also be reduced more easily. However, quite a number of Senators fear that a real slump in prices would make inroads in Government tax revenues that, combined with tax cuts of the size contemplated by the Knutson bill, would convert Treasury surpluses into deficits. Even Speaker Martin is prepared to "wait and see what happens in the next two weeks," although he maintains that there is no reason why the present price trend should prevent a cut in taxes.

The most popular argument in favor of tax cuts would also go by the board if declines in wholesale prices should continue and later be reflected in a drop in living costs. For sponsors of individual income-tax reductions have stressed the need of relieving the pressure of inflated living costs on consumers. On the other hand, if living costs do drop, a good many people who have opposed tax reduction because they feared that it would give another boost to inflation may change their minds and decide that tax reduction in a period of falling prices would be a good thing. Indeed, if the current price drop were to gain momentum, some of those recently opposed to tax reduction might become ardent advocates of slashing tax reductions as an antideflation measure.

We conclude, therefore, that the effect of price changes on the fate of tax-reduction plans is as unpredictable at present as the level of prices in the coming fiscal year. But of one thing we are certain: so long as the price situation remains highly unstable, Congress will have to proceed cautiously with tax-reduction plans unless it is prepared to risk a return to deficit financing.

Turning On The Light

No. V

Congressional inquiries should be dedicated to enlightment and not to persecution.

Congressional investigators exercise power that can be matched by few other officials in any branch of government. They are in a position not merely to expose corruption and disgrace unfaithful public officials, but also to destroy the reputations of private individuals. They may compel men to testify or go to jail. They may focus national attention upon a man's foibles or his virtues. They may ruin organizations and frequently force the hands of executive officials. Indeed, the investigating committee of Congress has been called the most powerful judgment seat in America.

In the light of these facts the selection of the chairman of an investigating committee ought to be no less careful than the selection of the Chief Justice of the United States. To him will be entrusted, in large measure, the duty of finding facts on the basis of which legislation may be enacted. In his keeping will be the rights, the reputations and the future welfare of an undetermined number of citizens. In short, the power to investigate before a Nation-wide audience is the power to exalt or to destroy, and it can be safely entrusted only to men of proven integrity, ability and sound judgment.

Practice has fallen woefully short of this ideal in various instances. Some years ago the House of Representatives permitted Representative Cox to head a committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission after the FCC had exposed his receipt of money from a radio broadcaster, whose case he had pleaded before the FCC. Investigator Cox was about as judicial as a prize fighter in the ring. Senator Brewster brought the investigative process into disrepute by using his great power as head of the Senate War Investigating Committee for personal or political advantage. Howard Hughes charged Mr. Brewster with offering to suppress the investigation of Mr. Hughes' company if the latter would agree to a merger with the Pan American Airways and accept the Senator's community airline bill. We do not know whether that charge is true or false, but we do know that Mr. Brewster put himself into an utterly untenable position when, as a partisan of a particular interest, he held to the chairmanship of this powerful committee. To be sure, he turned over the active conduct of the investigation to Senator Ferguson, but that did not save the Hughes inquiry from being discredited in the public mind as an attempt to use a tremendous public power for narrow personal purposes.

Most judges make a routine practice of disqualifying themselves when a case in which they might be suspected of bias comes before their court. They break away from the interests they had as lawyers and assume a strictly judicial attitude. No less should be expected, in our opinion, of the chairmen of powerful investigating committees. Nor should any chairman be in a position where it might be possible for him to shake down witnesses or potential witnesses before his committee. Like Caesar's wife, legislators exercising this great power ought to be above suspicion. Yet we find Representative J. Parnell Thomas, spearhead of probes by the Un-American Activities Committee which vitally affect many business groups, listing himself in the Congressional Directory as an insurance broker. The fact is that chairmanships of investigative committees have been distributed with alarming disregard for the fitness of the individual to conduct an impartial and disinterested inquiry. Here is one of the weakest aspects of congressional fact-finding to date, and unless it is corrected this powerful tool of democracy will continue to be dangerously abused.

REFUSAL

The fruit was there—the great yellow apples, giant plums—upon her dining table.
And we, small sisters errand-sent, for all our training were not able To keep our sidewalk path unbent. But, turning to her door—
So close the house was to the street—wide-eyed, we dared implore,

"Could we please have just one apiece?" And she, as right must go,
Was doubtless right: "I do not think your mother'd like your doing this, and so I think I'd best say no." And what had been adventure thus became
A queer young sadness and a sudden shame.

Perhaps the passing of some thirty years should cover deep that day
And why it hasn't I am not quite sure enough to say
Except that it was bitterness—and left upon the tongue
The taste of all refusals, and the grief of all the young!

Circle Trisection

After reading Alfred Friendly's scholarly article of February 1 about the "three famous problems" with which mathematicians are most familiar, I thought that The Washington Post would think twice before it again embarrassed itself on things mathematical.

However, I was both amused and chagrined to note on page one of the issue of February, another article about the circle. You picked up an Associated Press article which indicates that the Associated Press reporter possesses less intelligence than his "hero."

First of all, it is difficult to ascertain where the problem of trisecting the circle enters the discussion. Any public school student should know how to trisect the circle.

Secondly, as Friendly points out in his article, "pi" has been proved to be not only irrational but also transcendental.

Thirdly, mathematicians generally do not interpose any objection as to the kind of unit one uses in measuring the length of a circle. A degree is defined—universally accepted by scientists—as 1/360th of the circle—a carryover from ancient Babylonia, Alexandria and Greece. It is permissible to divide it into 384 parts, but you must call it by another name and not by "perfect degrees."

At the time of the French Revolution, when the rest of the c. g. s. scale was introduced, the French proposed measuring the circle in terms of grades defined as 1/100th of a right angle. Perhaps the only reason why it was never adopted is that it would have necessitated the complete revision of all known tables dealing with circles such as geographical, astronomical, the various nautical almanacas, etc. This would have entailed huge sums of money and years of work.

Mathematicians are not unaware of the disadvantages inherent in our methods of counting and measuring. In fact, with the approaching completion of electronic calculators, it may very well happen that the arithmetic curricular in our schools will be overhauled. We may revert to the ancient Biblical method of counting by twos.

Lincoln Day Speeches

So the Republican leaders are out on a tour, making Lincoln Day speeches! They hope to make us forget the able Democratic leadership we have been having since 1933 by presenting Abe Lincoln, simple man of the common people, as a Republican, but old Abe just wasn't their breed of Republican. Everyone knows that if he were here today they, together with big business and the lobbies which they represent, would repudiate him and brand him as a "Communist" or, at the very least, a "New Dealer."

He stood for government of the people, by the people, and for the people—not government by the lobbies, as has occurred too often in Republican administrations.

Lest anyone doubt about old Abe, I should like to quote as follows: "I see in the near future a crisis arising that unnerves me and makes me tremble for the safety of my country. As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned, and an era of corruption will follow until all the liberty shall be lost and the republic destroyed. God grant that my fears may prove groundless.—Abraham Lincoln."

"Baby Crop Support"

Many of us have read the pleas of Malvina Lindsay in The Washington Post, of February 12 "Baby Crop Support" with positive misgivings. Granted all the advantages claimed for early marriage, is this any reason why we should flood this country with babies? If Dr. Alfred E. Kinsey's "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male" teaches anything it teaches the need for better regulation of sex life and this might well include indiscriminate procreation. There is good reason to believe that the law of supply and demand is working in the present phenomena of our lessened baby production. At the rate of birth during the last decade this country would soon have developed into another China or India where centuries ago indiscriminate breeding, together with neglect of natural resources, brought on chronic poverty. If young people are now thinking twice before they leap into baby production, it is a sign of sanity.

The resources of this country we know have definite limitations. The depth of our top soil is now just about sufficient to insure a comfortable living to the number of people that we now have. A little more erosion and another decade or so of indiscriminate breeding and we shall need aid from the "Marshall planners" of some other planet, because the United States has already become the last hope of a world that would be sane.

Gallinger Internes

The Veterans' Administration order cutting off the allowance of the former service doctors now finishing their training at Gallinger Hospital must represent quite a triumph for someone guarding the public coffers There they were, about thirty men, getting paid a lusty 9 cent an hour, and trying to also get $90 a month to support their families.

The last Congress passed a regulation intended to forestall reduplications of governmental benevolence Thus, it intended that doctors in the Veterans' Administration who work a 40-hour week and get $3600 a year should not also get GI Bill benefits in the form of books and instruments. It was certainly a stroke of evil genius that allowed this intent to be interpreted to include the men at Gallinger who receive a $75 a month, and work 10 hours every day, and 24 hours every other day.

"Unity: Looking Ahead"

I read with much interest in the Calgary Herald a reprint of your editorial of January 24, "Unity: Looking Ahead."

I wholeheartedly agree that union would be a great thing for Canada, and I believe that well over 50 per cent of the people here believe so too. In fact, if we had a leader, I believe that within the space of a few short months the west would demand union.

There is a great deal of dissatisfaction with the present Dominion government, particularly among the farmers and small wage earners. Of course, the only way union could come about would be by the ballot, and I feel certain that the French Canadians would not favor it, but who knows, they might.

Home Rule Opposition

The citizens of Washington owe a great debt to The Washington Post for its February 8 editorial in which the disingenuous tactics of the Board of Trade to defeat the District home rule bill were exposed and discredited. It has long been evident that the directors of the Board of Trade, by insisting upon national representation first, have set back the cause of suffrage in Washington for many years.

Those who were present at the joint congressional hearings last week when Mr. Reilly, president of the board, testified that he had refused to consider the Auchincloss bill, since it could not grant national representation to residents of Washington, were agreeably startled to learn the following day from Mr. Stull that a special committee had been working in the Board of Trade to consider the suffrage proposals of H. R. 4902—and that the committee was in favor of the general principles of home rule.

The fact that Mr. Reilly chose to ignore the existence of this committee in his own testimony provides an apt illustration of the high-handed methods by which the Board of Trade is run. Under these circumstances, it is not surprising that its executive board should wish to perpetuate the present system of government in the District which provides such a convenient cloak for its pressure tactics.

It is also significant that the executive board should have postponed polling the members of the Board of Trade on the Auchincloss bill until January 30, almost three weeks after the bill was published, and that the Junior Board of Commerce has taken the same delaying action. It is not too far-fetched to assume that the results of these membership polls, which will be announced after the hearings have ended, will be exploited by the heads of both organizations to muster opposition to the home-rule bill.

The Committee of 100, which recently took action against H. R. 4902, employed equally undemocratic procedure in the conduct of the meeting at which the alternative proposals of the committee were adopted. Mrs. C. D. Lowe, who dissented from the majority at this meeting, has stated that only half of the 30-odd members present voted, and that of these, 13 were for and 3 against the proposals of the committee. The chairman, Mr. Melvin Sharp, refused to consider a minority report or even any detailed discussion of the report which was adopted.

As a final instance of undemocratic procedure I should like to mention last week's meeting of the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association, at which Congressman Deane and others discussed the home-rule bill. In spite of the overwhelming majority in support of its passage, the chairman, acting within the provisions of the by-laws, refused to permit a vote to be taken. As a meeting of the association the previous week had indorsed the President's Civil Rights Report, the chairman's fear of the democratic system can easily be understood, even if his action cannot be by any means condoned.

It seems evident that unless the citizens of Washington are prepared to use concerted action to oppose the tactics of an entrenched and determined minority of individuals who have a vested interest in the Commissioner form of government, the opportunity afforded by the Auchincloss bill for District home rule will be lost. It is well that they should be aware of the antidemocratic forces which have been lined up against the bill and of their peculiar tactics. Thus forearmed, the people of Washington will be better equipped to fight for their rights to become at last full-fledged citizens.

Dagger and Sponges

I SAW POLAND BETRAYED: By Arthur Bliss Lane (Bobbs-Merrill, $3.50.)

According to the testimony of the book itself, the betrayal occurred, six or seven months before Mr. Lane's appointment as Ambassador to Poland, at the Tehran Conference where the Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill agreed to what will doubtless become known historically as the Fifth Partition. So that what Mr. Lane really saw after he went to Warsaw in the midsummer of 1945 were the consequences of the betrayal. Like most other recent diplomatic memoirs, Mr. Lane's give evidence of having been prepared in a great hurry and of having been edited according to journalistic rather than literary canons; in short it is, to use the trade term, another quickie. It is written of course in the pompous idiom that diplomats employ in their official communications and which, after a few years in the service, apparently becomes habitual, like the chest tones of an actor or the courtroom manner of a judge. Yet the book is not without historical value, since it helps to explain why American diplomacy has become signalized in almost every part of the world by ineptitude and failure.

Mr. Lane tells us for one thing how he was kept in ignorance of decisions vitally affecting the destiny of the government and nation to which he was accredited. He was told no more about them than great body of his compatriots and even less than the Poles themselves. In October, 1944, which is to say approximately a year after Tehran, M. Mikolajczyk, then head of the Polish government-in-exile, managed to learn something at Moscow. There Comrade Molotov told him that the representatives of Great Britain and the United States had agreed that the eastern boundaries of Poland should be drawn at what was called the Curzon Line. The Messrs. Churchill, Eden and Harriman, it seems, were present at this interview, and Comrade Molotov called upon them to contradict him if his statement were untrue, which none of them did. Mr. Churchill, indeed, only a few weeks after the Tehran business, had given the Poles what Mr. Lane now considers to have been "an unmistakable hint" of how the wind was blowing. He had invited them to accept the Curzon Line in return for Danzig, East Prussia and part of Upper Silesia.

But Mr. Churchill, of course, had no election to worry about at that time; Mr. Roosevelt was in different case, and his ambiguity in replying to the anxious questions submitted by the Polish Ambassador, M. Ciechanowski, appears to have been prompted by a solicitude for the sensibilities of Polish-American voters. At about the time that Comrade Molotov was verifying M. Mikolajczyk's worst fears at Moscow, Mr. Roosevelt in Washington was persuading Mr. Charles Rozmarek of the Polish-American Congress that Poland's destiny was to be settled according to the principles of the Atlantic Charter. Evidently Mr. Lane was persuaded of the same thing, for when, shortly after the election of 1944, he obtained a brief interview with the President, he took the opportunity to suggest that the time had come to make it very clear to the Russians that the United States would insist upon the independence of Poland. Mr. Roosevelt inquired sarcastically whether Mr. Lane would have him go to war with Russia, which may seem to the reader to have been a hint almost as unmistakable as Mr. Churchill's proposals to M. Mikolajczyk.

IT WILL be observed, then, that Mr. Lane's education in these matters was none too rapid, although it doubtless proceeded at a faster pace than that of many of his colleagues. Throughout his embassy to Bogota he remained politely indifferent to the warnings of certain South American diplomats, and would not allow himself to be persuaded that the Kremlin intended to interfere with the independence of Poland. It was not until Mr. Lane came to Washington in the autumn of 1944 and began to acquaint himself intimately with the correspondence among Great Britain, the United States and Russia on the subject of Poland that he began to have misgivings about the purity of Russian purposes. What looked particularly queer and sinister was the course pursued by the Kremlin during the heroic and disastrous uprising of the Polish underground in Warsaw, when the Red Army was approaching the city. The insurrection had been incited by the Lublin Committee of National Liberation, and authorized by the Polish government in London in the confidence that the insurrectionaries would soon be relieved. But throughout the two months of desperate fighting in Warsaw the Red Army remained wholly inactive; not a shot was fired from its guns trained on the Nazi positions, not a Russian plane took to the skies, not another step was made in the direction of Warsaw, even when the insurrectionaries were in virtual control of the city.

When Mr. Lane presented his credentials to the new provisional government the organization of Poland into a police state had already begun. When he resigned, more than a year and a half later, the organization was well nigh complete. His mission was to see that the promise of "free and unfettered elections" given at Yalta, was fulfilled. He seems to have despaired of it from the beginning, but he made an effort in the face of the increasing truculence and arrogance of the Communist government. And here begins another of his bitter complaints. His effort was frustrated by Washington, which disregarded his reports and deprived him of the only arguments to which the commissars might conceivably listen.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Marshall-Vandenberg Plan

Lippmann

BY UNANIMOUS vote of the Senate Committee there is now before Congress a bill to carry out what might fairly be called the Marshall-Vandenberg plan. Nothing essential, it would appear, has been sacrificed that was in the original conception or in the State Department's proposals, and in important respects there have been additions and improvements.

The administrative provisions are a decided improvement, making the bill not only more acceptable to Congress but in fact more workable. In cutting the period of the appropriations from 15 months to 12, the bill in effect stipulates that the new Administration and the new Congress elected this autumn shall have the duty and the right to review the whole program early next winter. This amendment is sound in principle in that it treats the election with full respect, and it is sound in practice in that it says to the European governments that they have time to start on the program but no time to waste in demonstrating that they really mean to do what they have agreed to do. For the program will have to be reviewed next winter.

ON THE OTHER HAND, the bill does not reduce the dollars available to them during the first year. The dollars would be available at the rate of 500 million a month which is what the original Marshall Plan called for. Every effort should be made in the Senate and House not to reduce this rate. For in an operation of this kind an adequate action in the early stages will be the truest economy. To provide enough aid promptly offers the best prospect of relieving the tension of the economic and political crisis in Europe, and thus to get European recovery and reconstruction moving.

The provision in the Senate bill for an advance of one billion from the RFC is also most useful. It will mean that once Congress has approved the program, it will not be disrupted by the fact that it always takes so long for the Appropriations Committees to act. If this provision is upheld, the threat of another gap in the flow of necessary supplies, like that at the year's end, will be averted.

THE NEW PREAMBLE, which contains a declaration in favor of a customs union, is perhaps not so clear or so forthright as it might have been, and it could perhaps be improved by amendment from the floor. A customs union, though eventually desirable no doubt, is in many ways the most difficult kind of union to achieve soon. Without political union it will meet resistance from the governments thinking of their national security, and also from legitimate vested interests which have been established behind the existing tariff walls.

It would probably be better to take the line which Governor Dewey advocated in his Lincoln Day speech, and to state clearly that the ultimate objective of the program will be attained only by European union—not "Western Union" but European Union.

IF THIS PURPOSE is stated in carefully considered words, there should be no great risk of its being misunderstood abroad. It would not be hard to make it quite plain that the United States is not attempting to impose political unity upon Europe but only to facilitate it, and that the form of the union is for Europeans to determine.

But, if not in the preamble then at least in the debate and through diplomatic channels, it could be made plain why the United States of America is so interested in the formation of a United States of Europe. It is, because it wishes to do away with the threat of a world war in which Europe would be the battlefield, no one a true victor, and all mankind the victims. There will be no war if Europe recovers not only from the economic devastation of the last war but also from the political weakness which followed it. A strong Europe, which can be had only by uniting Europe, is indispensable to the security of all—including the Russians and ourselves—security against the menace of a world war.

Venezuelan President Is Inaugurated

Caracas, Venezuela, Feb. 15 (AP). Romulo Gallegos was inaugurated today as Venezuela's first President elected by popular vote.

Gallegos succeeds Romulo Betancourt, president of the junta which has governed the country since the 1945 revolution.

In a short inaugural address, the new President said the revolution, followed by the election of a President and Congress by direct vote, had marked the people's recovery of sovereignty, which he intended to preserve.

He was sworn in by Valmore Rodriquez, president of the senate, at the national capitol. The ceremony was attended by diplomats and representatives from nearly every nation in the Western Hemisphere.

The election of Gallegos, a former school teacher, novelist and a nonmilitary man, sets a new pattern in Venezuelan political life. During most of the nation's history a man below the rank of general could not aspire to become chief executive.

Naval vessels sent to participate in the inauguration included the U. S. aircraft carrier Saipan and destroyer Witek, the British cruiser Sheffield and Colombian and Dutch gunboats.

FBI Seeks 2 In Capone Aide Parole Inquiry

By the United Press

FBI agents are looking for two men wanted by congressional investigators for questioning in connection with the parole of four former Al Capone gangsters from Leavenworth Prison, it was disclosed yesterday.

A House subcommittee will open hearings in Chicago today on the paroles granted August 13 to Charles Gioe, Louis Campagna, Phil D'Andrea and Paul DiLucia, all one-time Capone lieutenants.

They were convicted of conspiracy to extort more than $1,500,000 from the motion picture industry with threats to call strikes and cause labor violence. The quartet was sent to the Atlanta Penitentiary, later transferred to Leavenworth, and freed by the Federal Parole Board after serving one third of their 10-year terms.

Walter K. Urich, parole executive of the Federal Parole Board, said "the paroles went through one month after the men became eligible. Since then, to the best of my knowledge, none has violated his parole and that's the real test."

The four will be called before the subcommittee, along with the persons who "sponsored" their paroles.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Battle For The Republican Soul

BOTH LEADING CONTENDERS for the Republican nomination, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft, have made significant changes in tactics. The changes assure something very important that was not previously in prospect—a major national debate on great issues of policy between the opposing wings of the Republican Party, with the outcome to be decided at the Philadelphia convention.

Until recently, Dewey's tactics were to present himself to the Nation as the busy Governor. The idea was that he might just possibly be tempted to undertake larger duties, yet was mainly preoccupied with the problems of New York State. This kind of transparent deception was excused by all the precedents of American politics, according to which the office must seek the man, whereas in fact the man is running his legs off after the office.

As for Taft, there was no secret that his representatives were bidding hard in the great quadrennial delegate auction of the South (an infinitely more remarkable event than the better publicized Southern tobacco sales). Elsewhere, also, Taft was seeking delegates, presenting himself as the leader of the Republican Congress, and standing on the record of the Congress.

Taft has now modified his line, abandoning the rather uphill task of arousing national enthusiasm for the record of the Congress, and seeking instead simply to sell Taft and Taft's views.

DEWEY HAS ACTUALLY CHANGED his line completely, as his remarkable Lincoln Day speech at Boston clearly discloses. There was obvious politics in what Dewey said about the bipartisan foreign policy. His speech was also the plainest, hardest-hitting, most comprehensive and ablest exposition of the realistic approach to world problems which the country has received from any leader except Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg.

It is reported that the change in tactics which Dewey completed with this speech was the result of careful and prayerful analysis of polls taken for the Dewey organization by one of the national opinion-testing outfits. Even the polls already published in the newspapers have plainly shown that the voters now want strong, decisive leadership. A coy preoccupation with the problems of State government was inconsistent with national leadership in the grand manner. Dewey has therefore consciously set out to show how much of the stuff of leadership is in him.

While Dewey was speaking in Boston, Senator Taft was also voicing his views on his Midwestern campaign trip. The difference between the two men was most clearly disclosed in their approach to the problem of appropriations for the European recovery program.

Dewey was the first important American politician to talk plain common sense on this subject. He said, in effect, that national survival, or at least avoidance of another terrible war, hung upon ERP's success. Therefore he advocated giving ERP the strongest possible administrator, and then putting at the administrator's disposal ample funds to do the job. He pointed out what has been obvious from the start, that the sum needed for ERP could not be determined in advance. And he sensibly suggested that if the administrator could be counted on not to waste money, it was wise to provide him with an adequate operating margin.

TAFT, ON THE OTHER HAND, gave grudging lip service to the ERP idea, but made it obvious that he would prefer the risk of too little money for ERP rather than the risk of too much. This implies that he has not grasped the gigantic risk of ERP failure, And herein lies the essential difference between the two men. Taft, with his nostalgia for a pleasanter past, looks backward, and is reluctant to face the grim facts of the present. Dewey, also briskly up-to-date, has faced all the facts, however grim, and has made up his mind that these facts must be dealt with.

This is the fundamental issue which the two men are now debating. In his opening effort, Governor Dewey has posed the issue squarely, Taft is also speaking out with the bleak honesty, so odd in a politician, which makes men admire him even when they disagree with him. His most extraordinary recent demonstration of this trait was at Omaha, Nebr., in the heart of the farm belt, where he advocated lower farm parity payments. Most politicians would have preferred to kick an adult Bengal tiger in the belly.

The difference between Taft and Dewey also happens to be the difference between the two great factions of Republicanism. Whether or not either man wins the grand prize, this beginning of forthright debate between them is a hopeful sign.

Ramsay's Guardsmen

Players to Aid Restoration Plan

By Richard L. Coe

THE NEWLY-FORMED Alexandria Playhouse already has a project . . . It wants to be certain that the city's "Old Ramsay house" doesn't look as it does in that picture on this page when Alexandria starts celebrating its Bicentennial next year . . . It's got a benefit coming up next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, proceeds of which will go to bringing the $1200 thus far raised nearer the $25,000 require to do the job on the Ramsay House . . . The play will be, for perhaps only the title's inference, Molnar's "The Guardsman," with Earl Schuon, Beverly Gray, Wanda Nicholson, Arthur Hanson and Joseph Sullivan in the cast . . . Ramsay's, which sank from its 1748 rank as the home of the town's first mayor, was quite a beer spot not so long ago and was partially destroyed by fire in 1942. . . . Then it was bought by a Washington builder, who announced he was going to erect a modern building in its place . . . Old Alexandria was shaken to its patrician roots by by such a notion and the cityl bought it, designating the Alexandria Historical Society to save the building from the wheels of progress . . . Breathing the conviction her daddy used to have for the rights of aircraft, Gen. Billy Mitchell's daughter, Elizabeth, is at the helm of the player's venture to bring back glory to King and Royal streets . . . Shops in Alexandria will be selling tickets for "The Guardsman," and they'll also be on sale in town here at Kitt's.

WALKER KERR'S talk at the Charles Carroll Forum brought up the point that the movies now are attracting the masses the way the stage used to do in the days of Euripides and Shakespeare . . . Catholic University's playwrighting professor observed that while most people say that the stage is superior to the movies, their actions belie their words and they trot off en masse to the pictures. . . . The reason, stated Kerr, is that the stage has forgotten that its primary function is to delight and not, as he says is now the case, to persuade. . . . He took the professor's justifiable long-range view of the matter and touched on economic and critical aspects of the theater's problems. . . . He has a case, of course, but had he delved deeper into the economic problem of today's theater—which is considerably more complex than he suggested—he would have come nearer the heart of the matter. . . . But it was a good talk and very well attended.

JUST THE SORT of play Kerr was referring to opens tonight at the National, "Pick-Up Girl." . . . If you read Author Elsa Shelley's piece in our Sunday section, you know that while she admits "entertainment" is the first rule of a play, she very definitely is trying to say something in her story of a young girl who comes to grief through no fault of her own.

PETER FERNANDEZ will be appearing with Washington's Peggy Ann Garner in "Pick-Up Girl," by the way, and it will be interesting to see what sort of chap he's become . . . Representative John Davis Lodge will remember Peter as one of his nephews when he was appearing in Lillian Hellman's "Watch on the Rhine" before he went in the Navy . . . We first saw Fernandez as the Western Union boy in William Saroyan's short-lived but delightful "Love's Old Sweet Song." . . . Peter was just a sprout of about 10 then, but his scenes with Walter Huston and Jessie Royce Landis were grand . . . He didn't have so much to do in the Hellman play, then the disappeared from our ken, and we're pleased to find him again in Miss Garner's company.

EAGLE LION is a comparatively new company, but by a fluke it finds itself up to the ears in smuggling . . . And on both sides of the fence . . . It's J. Arthur Rank feature, opening Thursday at the Metropolitan, is titled "The Smugglers" and tells how an eighteenth century British gang beat HM's Customs Department . . . It's American-made "T-Men," due next month at the Warner, relates how the U. S. Treasury deals with a gang smuggling papers for counterfeit money.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY'S Art Department programs a dance recital by Erika Thimey's Dance Theater Friday night at 8:30 in Hurst Hall on the campus.

TOMORROW is the final registration date for drama groups to enter the One-Act Play Tournament annually sponsored by the D. C. Recreation Department . . . Registration may be made at Recreation HQ, 3149 16th st., or by calling ADams 2050.

SEAT SALE for Boris Karloff in "The Linden Tree" opens this morning at the National.

HELP WANTED: This is Alexandria's Ramsey House, once the home of the city's first mayor. The Alexandria Playhouse is starting a series of benefit performances, which will contribute to a fund to restore Ramsey House in time for next year's Alexandria Bicentennial. For further details, see Richard L. Coe's column on this page

U. S. Forces Close For War Game 'Kill'

Cruisers and Destroyers Move on Vieques To Soften 'Enemy' Defenses for Landing

By James M. Minifie

Aboard USS Taconic, Feb. 15 (NYHT).—Cruisers and destroyers supporting the joint expeditionary forces' amphibious exercises off Puerto Rico moved close in to Vieques Island today to soften up "enemy" defenses with salvoes with their six-inch and five-inch batteries.

Vieques is the objective of assault landing exercises involving 55 Navy vessels and more than 16,000 officers and men of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

It is assumed the eastern half of the island is the colony of an enemy power used as a weather station, air warning station and a launching point for rocket and guided missile attacks against the southeastern United States. It is about 1750 miles from Washington and 1100 miles from Miami.

There are assumed to be about 4500 enemy troops on the island with no reinforcement within 24 hours' steaming. Our forces have command of the sea and air.

"It would be suicidal to attempt such a landing without those factors," Capt. Philip P. Welch, chief of staff, pointed out.

The fleet of three attack transports and 21 smaller vessels carrying landing troops is out of sight below the horizon waiting to come in on D-Day. The Army Regimental combat team of the Sixty-fifth Infantry Division has already been landed and will move onto the beaches after they have been "taken." The actual assault landings will be made by two battalion combat teams of the Second Marine Division with additional units of artillery and special groups.

15 Leaders Urge Passage of Bill On Job Equality

New York, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—A committee of 15 of the country's most prominent business and civic leaders today urged passage of the Ives-Fulton bill against discrimination in employment.

The committee wired House Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) and Senator Vandenburg (R., Mich.) that discrimination is "uneconomic, undemocratic and un-American. It results in an unsound use of manpower and retards the development of purchasing power. It weakens the position of the United States in the eyes of the world and in the war of ideas between freedom and totalitarianism."

Members of the committee are Paul C. Smith, general manager of the San Francisco Chronicle; Henry R. Luce, publisher of Time, Life and Fortune; Nelson A. Rockefeller, Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association; Anna M. Rosenberg, Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the board of R. H. Macy and Co.; Spyros P. Skouras, president of Twentieth Century Fox; Herbert Bayard Swope, Oren Root, jr., William L. Batt, president of S. K. F. Industries; Allen W. Dulles, of Sullivan and Cromwell; Paul G. Hoffman, president of Studebaker Corp.; Dwight R. G. Palmer, president of the General Cable Corp.; Martin Quigley, president of Quigley Publishing Co., and Charles H. Tuttle, of Breed, Abbott and Morgan.

Richmond Pilot Killed in Crash Of Private Plane

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—William F. Gerhardt of Richmond, was killed today when he crashed attempting to land his small plane at the University of Virginia airport.

Mild Weather To Continue

conditions in two areas of Prince Georges County, Md.

The Northwest Branch of the Anacostia River overflowed Saturday night and early yesterday in Bladensburg. County police said the water rose to 18 inches near the Peace Cross at about 4 a. m. The Maryland State Roads Commission ordered all traffic detoured from Bladensburg rd. to Rhode Island ave. The water receded gradually during the day and the road block was lifted.

An ice jam caused the Northwest Branch to flood basements of two homes in Avenal, Md., in Prince Georges County. Houses of Mr. and Mrs. William Ferrando and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew H. MacIntire had four to five feet of water in the cellars, which the College Park fire department pumped out.

The rise in the level of the Potomac River was almost negligible. It was estimated the level had increased by only .2 of a foot yesterday and only a total of .7 of a foot since 4 p. m. Saturday.

Elevator Shaft Fall Fatal to District Man, 49

A 49-year-old man died at Emergency Hospital yesterday afternoon shortly after he fell one flight down an elevator shaft to the basement.

He was Herbert E. Grover of 3200 16th st. nw., identified as a court reporter.

Police said he apparently opened the elevator door on the first floor of 306 9th st. nw. and stepped through, dropping to the basement. The elevator was at an upper floor at the time.

He was rushed to Emergency Hospital in Fire Rescue Squad No. 1 and died there at 2:10 p. m., apparently of internal injuries. An autopsy will be performed at the District morgue today.

Police said his son, Herbert W. Grover, 19, a student at Georgetown University, was with him at the time of the accident.

Grover, in addition to the son, is survived by his wife.

Scheele, New Surgeon General, Career Man in Health Service

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Dr. Leonard A. Scheele's career exemplifies the opportunities for physicians in the United States Public Health Service.

Dr. Scheele

At 40, Dr. Scheele (rhymes with really), was appointed last week by President Truman to head that quasi-military arm of the Government. The position carries a commissioned rank equivalent to an Army major general.

He was named to succeed Dr. Thomas Parran as Surgeon General on April 6, at expiration of Dr. Parran's third successive four-year term.

Like his predecessors, Dr. Scheele will take over operation of the National Mental Health Act, the Hospital Survey and Construction Act, and the Federal Employes Health Act. USPHS has been expanding since an act of Congress in 1798 created its forerunner, the Marine Hospital Service, "for the relief of sick and disabled seamen."

He plans no general reorganization of health service work.

Tribute to Parran

"The service was effectively organized under Dr. Parran," he said yesterday in his best deskside manner.

Did he [Scheele] have any special projects?

"No pet projects," he answered. "We just have to keep going after the killers and the cripplers, cancer, tuberculosis, typhoid, and the rest. Then there's heart disease, the biggest killer of them all. It needs a tremendous amount of research."

Because of present legislative moves to further study of heart disease, Dr. Scheele said he was uncertain whether USPHS, through its National Health Institute, would be assigned extensive research in that field.

"But someone will have to tackle the problems, and tackle them soon," he declared.

Dr. Scheele, proud to call himself a USPHS career man, saw the possibilities of Public Health Service in 1932 when he was studying medicine at Wayne University, Detroit, where he got his M.D. He interned at the United States Marine Hospital in Chicago and applied for and was accepted as an assistant surgeon (first lieutenant) in USPHS in 1934.

First Assignment

By then he was already five years married. His wife, a dentist in Detroit, gave up her career to follow him on his first assignment, as assistant quarantine officer for the Port of San Francisco, reverting to her profession during his three World War II years overseas.

After a year of health quarantine duties in San Francisco and another at the Port of Honolulu, Dr. Scheele was appointed health officer of Queen Annes County, Md., 1936-37. During the next two years he trained in his present specialty, cancer research, as special fellow, Memorial Hospital, New York. He was appointed officer in charge of the National Cancer Control Program, National Cancer Institute, at Bethesda, Md., in 1939.

The work took him more and more into administrative duties but he did not neglect research into cancer. In 1942, he was named chief of the field casualty section, medical division, Office of Civilian Defense, to prepare for possible bombing and invasion. In 1942, he was loaned to the Army for assignment to military government medical work overseas.

War Service Overseas

He served in military government and civil affairs in Africa and Italy, and later with Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces, in all the countries of northwest Europe. For this he received the Legion of Merit, the Typus Medal, and France's Order of the Public Health.

In 1945, he returned to his former post at the National Cancer Institute; was made its assistant chief in 1946, and Assistant Surgeon General (brigadier general) and Director of NCI, last July.

Dr. Scheele, his wife, and their three children live at 5521 Johnson ave., Bethesda, Md. The youngsters are Alexandra M., almost 11; Signe Maria L., 7, and Leonard A. M. 11 months.

Va. Budget Increase Of 13 Million Asked

Louderback Says That Other Bills Now Pending Would Add 12 Million to Total

Richmond, Va., Feb. 15 (AP).—Requests amounting to $13,392,575 more than the Governor's budget recommendations for the next biennium have been received by the House appropriations and Senate finance committees.

The total was announced today by Delegate Charles C. Louderback of Page County, chairman of the House appropriations committee. Louderback said that in addition to this sum, bills are in committees of both houses which, if passed, would involve expenditure of $12,389,695.

Louderback pointed out that even if the budget amounts were appropriated only as recommended and the Governor's tax program is passed by the Senate, the estimated balance in the State's general fund on June 30, 1950, would be only $7,440,598.

This leaves a substantial gap between the added amounts asked by the various institutions, expenditures involved in the pending bills and the estimated balance in the general fund.

Considering the size of the budget—a half billion dollars—Louderback said this was "a very close operation" in the light of present conditions and the uncertainties of the next two years.

Declining markets, he said, would reduce income on which a large portion of the revenue is based and thereby cut into one of the major sources of income to the State.

Final action on the appropriation bill is dependent upon what the Senate does to the Governor's tax program which already has been passed by the House of Delegates. Louderback said that he hoped to have the appropriations bill before the House by next week.

"The budget," he added, "will be balanced when it reaches the floor of the House."

In the meantime, Louderback said he plans to confer with Senator John S. Battle of Charlottesville, chairman of the Senate finance committee, and with other members of the commitee so that when the appropriation bill is brought before the Legislature it will represent "a composite of Senate-House judgment."

Louderback said that after his full committee finishes going over the items in the appropriations bill it will be given further study by a subcommittee which he will appoint.

House Unit Ready To Hear Speakers For Communists

An appearance by a Communist Party spokesman may wind up congressional hearings next week on legal methods for controlling Reds.

Chairman Nixon (R., Calif.) informed reporters his House Un-American Activties Subcommittee is holding a spot open for the Communists for Friday afternoon. The subcommittee invited William Z. Foster, head of the Communist Party, to testify. Foster hasn't said he will or won't show up.

Henry Winston, organizational secretary of the party, has asked the subcommittee to hear Benjamin Davis. Davis is a Communist member of the New York City Countl.

In the past, there have been explosions when Communists have turned up at Un-American Activities Committee hearings. But Nixon said there is going to be "no circus or show" this time.

Montgomery Health Up to 'Lady Medic'

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

An attractive "lady medic," one of only two in the State of Maryland, is currently responsible for the health of the 135,000 residents of Montgomery County.

Dr. Christman

She is Dr. Claire A. Christman, assistant health officer of the county for the past five years. During the three months of the absence of Dr. V. L. Ellicott, she is serving as health officer.

A graduate of the Washington Missionary College in Takoma Park, Dr. Christman received her medical degree at the College of Medical Evangelists in Los Angeles.

Tells Reason for Choice

She resolved to enter the field of public health soon after becoming interested in medicine, she says, the prime reason being because she believes "the extent of a patient's cure should not be determined by the amount of money he has."

Public health in Montgomery County, which this year alone will cost approximately $211,000, is a complicated and big business. But the administration of it is an easy task for Dr. Christman, she declares. In private life she is Mrs. Paul K. Croft, wife of an engineer with the Naval Ordnance Laboratory and mother of a 6-month-old boy.

The biggest volume of department business is handled by the maternal and child hygiene clinics conducted at 11 health centers throughout the county, she explained.

The health official said she is currently preparing a venereal disease treatment program for handling of infectious cases at the Gallinger Hospital rapid treatment center.

Her chief concern of the moment is the preparation of a comprehensive rheumatic fever control program and prevention of the heart crippling disease among school children.

Rep. Thomas Back, In Walter Reed

By The Associated Press

Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) arrived early yesterday and was taken to Walter Reed Hospital by ambulance.

Thomas, chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, was stricken three weeks ago off Panama with gastro intestinal hemorrhage. He left there Saturday by plane.

"I feel much better," he told photographers as he walked off the plane, dressed in pajamas and a topcoat.

IT'S stopped you more than once as its graceful length moves smoothly down the street.

And again and again, you've turned to look at this fashion plate that so plainly proclaims its power and mobility in every line and action.

Now listen to the engineering story that makes this the car of the year, most wanted not only for stunning good looks but for all-round goodness.

You ride here behind Fireball power that is lively and eager and big—and now cradled to the fluid smoothness of still waters running deep.

You relax in big cushioned interiors that are rich and fine in finish—and so blissfully quiet that it seems a whisper can be heard throughout the car.

Your tires are soft pillowy cushions, your four springs gentle coils, your rims the sure-footed Safety-Ride kind that only Buick provides.

Your ride is the first one truly shielded against road shudder and shiver by scientific damping of vibration build-up within the car.

And if you choose a ROADMASTER, you can treat yourself to Dynaflow Drive*—a liquid-smooth drive that does away with all gear-shifting.

You'll drive the only car on the market where the power plant does what gears used to do—and driving becomes a near-miracle of ease.

You profit, in Buick, from 30-odd new advances—choose from ten sparkling models—select from three series in three wheelbases and four power ratings.

You get style—you get size—you get comfort, quiet and ease—and ever the solid goodness that the name Buick stands for.

So why are you waiting, when waiting only puts off the brightest moment of a motoring lifetime? See your dealer and place your order now.

Art Valpey, Crisler Aide, Head Coach At Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 15 (AP).—The appointment of Arthur L. Valpey, an assistant coach at the University of Michigan for the past six years, as head football coach at Harvard under a three-year contract was announced tonight by Athletic Director William J. Bingham.

Bingham said Valpey accepted the appointment at his home in Ann Arbor, Mich., this afternoon when informed by telephone that he had received the unanimous approval of Harvard's nine-man athletic committee.

Valpey made a personal appearance before the Crimson's committeemen here Friday but they were unable to take final action because Basketball Captain George Hauptfuhrer, one of the three undergraduates on the board, was in Philadelphia with his teammates to play Pennsylvania.

Youngest Candidate

The 32-year-old Valpey was the youngest of three candidates Bingham submitted from a field of 50-odd as successor to Dick Harlow, who resigned because of ill health shortly after the Crimson ended its disastrous 1947 season.

Valpey started in football as a Dayton, Ohio, schoolboy and in 1934 entered Michigan, where he was a regular end for three seasons.

He coached high school football in Ida, Mich., Manchester, Mich., and Midland, Mich., before accepting the freshman line coaching berth at Michigan in 1942. He was varsity end coach under Fritz Crisler during the 1946-47 seasons.

A Tough Task Ahead

Only the second nongraduate coach Harvard has had since 1874—Harlow being the other, from 1935-47—Valpey appears to have assumed a gigantic football task.

Next fall Harvard will play Columbia, Cornell, Army, Darthouth, Holy Cross, Princeton, Brown and Yale in that order.

Bingham was unwilling to discuss Valpey's salary terms, which probably do not exceed $10,000. The Crimson athletic director indicated Valpey would select his own assistants.

Detroit, Bradley Join Missouri Valley Conference

Kansas City, Feb. 15 (AP).—Detroit University and Bradley University of Peorgia, Ill., were voted membership in the Missouri Valley Conference effective immediately, at a meeting of the league's faculty representatives here today.

The admittance of Bradley and Detroit give the Missouri Valley Conference an eight-school circuit. Other members in the 4-year-old conference, which was organized in Kansas City in 1907, are Oklahoma A. and M., Tulsa University, St. Louis University, Creighton University, Wichita and Drake.

The addition of Bradley and Detroit both previously independent teams ,is expected to help the conference especially in football where the schedule has deteriorated considerably in recent years. The football championship was won last year by Tulsa which played only two league games.

Oklahoma A. & M. and St. Louis currently rate as top-ranking national basketball powers. The conference plays a round-robin cage schedule.

St. John's Turns Back Mounts, 49-22

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The St. John's Cadets trimmed Mount St. Joseph's of Baltimore, 49-22, yesterday in the second game of a high school doubleheader in the National Guard Armory.

Before a howling crowd of more than 2000, Gonzaga's Purple Eagles defeated La Salle of Cumberland, Md., 36-26, in the first game.

The second game victory ran the Cadets' winning streak to 14 in a row. They avenged their only loss of the season, a 36-35 defeat dealt them by the Mounts five weeks ago.

Their record now 18-1, the Cadets are virtually assured a bid to the Catholic Eastern Interscholastic invitational tournament in Newport, R. I., April 3-5.

Mounts' Streak Ends

The St. John's triumph snapped a 16-game Mount St. Joseph's winning streak. The only previous loss suffered by the Gaels this season was to Baltimore Poly in the opening game.

The St John's starters combined to function like a well-oiled machine. Jack George, driving in for layups, and Tom Fannon working in the pivot slot, took St. John's scoring honors with 13 and 10 points.

Al Weaver's set shots accounted for nine. And Vince Durkin and Billy Martins, smallest of the Johnnies, set up the plays for the bigger boys.

Off to Fast Start

They were off to a running start in the first quarter. They scored three field goals before Lew Reich could tally the Mounts' first point from the foul line. Still rolling, the Cadets wer ahead, 13-1, at the first quarter mark.

It wasn't until two minutes into the second quarter that the Mounts could crack the St.John's defense for their first field goal. That was a lay-up by Reich. Improving as they went along, the Cadets were ahead 30-6 at intermission.

The Mounts' best period was the third when they outscored St. John's, 10-9. But the Cadets' defense tightened to hold Mount St. Joseph's scoreless for the first six minutes of the last quarter. Then the Cadet reserves were sent in and they yielded six points.

Navy Veteran Paces Losers

Reich, a 20-year-old Navy veteran, permitted to play high school ball under Maryland rules, accounted for 12 of his team's points.

The Gonzaga-LaSalle game was a dull affair for three quarters, with the Washington team trailing, 23-20, going into the last quarter.

However, Gonzaga got hot to outscore the invaders, 16-6, in the last eight minutes to win.

James (Slim) Larkins and Clem Conlin paced Gonzaga with eight points apiece. Jack Stotler was high for LaSalle with 12.

Gonzaga's win was its fifteenth in 19 games. LaSalle's record is 8-10.

AAC After Balance

20 Players Shifted to Help Colts, Dodgers and Rockets

Chicago, Feb. 15 (AP).—The Chicago Rockets, Baltimore Colts and Brooklyn Dodgers today were bolstered by 20 football players transferred by stronger clubs in the All-America Conference to balance the 1948 title campaign better.

A spokesman for the AAC said the names of the players being shifted would be "released piecemeal by the clubs obtaining them at such time as they see fit."

"The Colts received eight players, one of whom is pending upon signing a contract. The Dodgers and Rockets obtained six men apiece," he said.

"The clubs got about what they asked for. The players involved are a mixture of backs and linemen to fortify the weaker spots of the teams."

Conference representatives began tackling the schedule making task calling for the eight teams to play 14 games, seven at home and seven on the road.

Coaches had one important recommendation—that officials be instructed to be more strict in calling penalties for piling on. No playing rule changes are expected.

The new ownership of the Rockets probably will be announced Monday, a spokesman said.

The shaping of a 1948 schedule and ways and means of balancing the league has so far taken up most of the discussions at the conference of the owners and league officials.

This much was settled: the season begins August 25 and ends December 5. There will be a playoff between the Eastern and Western champions December 12.

Providence Beats Stags

Chicago, Feb. 15 (AP).—The Providence Steamrollers, paced by Mel Thurston, reserve forward who scored 17 points in the second half, rallied to upset the Chicago Stags, 85 to 79, in Chicago Stadium today in a Basketball Association of America game.

Today's victory was Providence's second of the season over the Stags and their sixth triumph in 38 league games.

High-point man of the contest was Max Zaslofsky, Stag forward, who collected 24 points to run his season's total to 658 in 33 games. Thurston topped the winners with 21 points.

Interhigh Tie Snarls Plans For Playoffs

Hardy Pearce, director of athletics in the public schools, has asked Interhigh basketball coaches to help him solve a schedule problem today which he fears will pop up Friday.

Eastern, Anacostia, Wilson and McKinley Tech are tied for third place in the race for playoff berths and the likelihood is that three of the teams will wind up their regular slates Friday still tied.

	W.	L.	Pct.		W.	L.	Pct.
Roosevelt	5	1	.833	Tech	3	3	.500
Central	5	1	.833	Wilson	3	3	.500
Eastern	3	3	.500	Western	2	4	.333
Anacostia	3	3	.500	Coolidge	0	6	.000

The coaches don't have to worry about the top two berths. Central and Roosevelt clinched them last Friday.

Since the playoffs must begin no later than a week from today, some sort of "playoff for the playoffs" will have to be arranged Saturday.

Friday's schedule finds Eastern favored over seventh-place Western, and Tech the choice over last-place Coolidge. Anacostia and Wilson meet head on.

So the teams involved in the scramble for the playoffs will probably be Eastern, Tech and the winner of the Anacostia-Wilson game.

The coaches then will be faced with two problems:

1. How to conduct a three-team playoff in one day, probably Saturday.

2. Where to play the "playoff for the playoffs." The National Guard Armory, where all league games have been played this season is already rented Saturday night for the George Washington-Georgetown game.

Pearce will propose the following solutions:

1. Have the coaches of the three teams flip a coin after Friday night's games. The odd man's team would be awarded third place and a playoff berth. The other two would play off for fourth place Saturday.

2. Return after a year's absence to the Tech gym for the Saturday night game if Tech is not one of the teams involved. Or, if Tech is involved, try to arrange use of the armory for an afternoon game.

The championship playoffs open Monday with the first and fourth place teams and the second and third quints clashing. The winners battle for the championship Friday, February 27. All playoff games will take place at the armory.

First place will be decided this Friday, when Central and Roosevelt, tied for the top position, battle it out.

Schneiter Has Full Power Over Tourneys

No Action Taken Against Von Nida

Harlingen, Tex., Feb. 15 (U.P.).—George Schneiter was named tournament czar of the Professional Golfers Association today and suspended Henry Ransom of Ravinia, Ill., for two weeks as the aftermath of a fist fight between Ransom and Australian star Norman von Nida yesterday in the Lower Rio Grande Valley Open.

Ransom was suspended for "conduct detrimental to golf," Schneiter said. No action was taken against Von Nida.

"Ransom struck the first blow," Schneiter said.

Meanwhile, Schneiter, who was named tournament commissioner by PGA golfers last night after the first fight, talked via telephone with Ed Dudley, PGA president, in New York. Schneiter said Dudley told him:

Has Dudley's Backing

"I will back you 100 per cent in any action."

"This is a great step forward," Schneiter said. "It will get the players' attitude on the right track, and will let sponsors know we appreciate them."

"There won't be a rules committee. This will get things on the basis where something like what happened today won't occur again."

Lawson Little resigned last night as chairman of the PGA tournament rules committee after two days of dispute about rules, climaxed by the Ransom and Von Nida scuffle.

The two pros swapped punches after finishing their round in the $10,000 tournament. Von Nida said that Ransom stroked a putt and then hit it again. Von Nida charged that Ransom only counted it as one stroke.

Little Overruled

Little resigned because his committee was overruled on attempting to disqualify three pros—not identified—for violation of rules.

The rules in question were "local rules," adopted to fit conditions at the Harlingen course. The confusion was traced to two sets of rules—one printed on the score cards and the other mimeographed on separate sheets.

Schneiter took the blame for the extra set.

"Now it's all over," Schpeiter said today. "The air has been cleared entirely."

Members of the golfing fraternity agreed that the Ransom-Von Nida fight had nothing to do with the rules issue ironed out last night at a 3½-hour meeting of the golfers.

After the meeting, held behind closed doors, Schneiter emerged to announce that he had been named to enforce rules at all tournaments.

Tony Butler, Harlingen municipal course pro, had indicated last night that Ransom's suspension was under way but Schneiter would not confirm it then.

Mangrum, Demaret Tie, Playoff Today

Harlingen, Tex., Feb. 15 (AP).—Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago, and Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., finished in a tie for first place in the $10,000 lower Rio Grand Valley open today with 269 for 72 holes and will meet tomorrow in an 18-hole play-off for first money.

Mangrum faltered in the stretch to go two over par on the 35-36—71, 6045-yard Harlingen Municipal Course, finishing with a 73 when he missed a 12-foot putt on the eighteenth Green that would have given him the title.

Demaret shot a three-under-par 68 to earn the tie with Mangrum.

Dramatic Finish

The finish was dramatic. Playing together in the last threesome on the course were Mangrum, Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., and Al Smith of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Smith needed a 15-foot putt to tie Mangrum and Demaret for first, and barely missed. Heafner tried a 30-footer that would have also put him in a tie for the lead but missed.

Hacknoedel- ao m mm mm mm

Mangrum ran into trouble on the last hole. His second shot landed on a downgrade and in trying to getit off, he topped the ball. It took another shot to get out and two to go down.

Demaret Over on No. 4

Mangrum missed a 3-footer on No. 5 to go one over on the hole and on No. 10 landed in some brush to go one over again. His only birdie was a 3-footer on No. 11.

Demaret also missed a 3-footer at No. 4 on the front nine that would have given him the tournament. He sank a 40-footer for an eagle on No. 16 to make up for that lapse, however.

Smith and Heafner finished in a tie for third place with 270. While Ky Laffoon of St. Andrews, Ill., wound up in fifth spot with 271. Tied for sixth were Carey Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn., and John Palmer of Radin, N. C., with 273 each.

Austria's Eva Pavlik Is Second

Davos Platz, Switzerland, Feb. 15 (AP).—Barbara Ann Scott of Canada gave another dazzling performance today despite soft ice to retain her woman's world figure skating championship.

Thus the 19-year-old blonde from Ottawa completed a sweep of the sport's three major titles. Besides capturing the Olympic crown at St. Moritz, slender Barbara Ann won the European championship at Prague last month.

A crowd of 4000 watched silently as the Canadian ballerina of the ice, clad in a white costume trimmed with silver, danced to the tune of "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," in her four minutes of free skating.

Then the fans gave her a thundering ovation. They poured on to the ice to offer her congratulations, chocolates and handshakes.

Smilingly she greeted them all and signed countless books and papers for the autograph hunters.

Among those who greeted her was Dick Button, the 18-year-old star from Englewood, N. J. Button won the men's world title as well as the Olympic laurel.

Surprisingly two of the nine judges—the Hungarian and Austrian officials—voted against the champion. They awarded her second place while the other seven all agreed on Barbara Ann.

Miss Scott accumulated a total of 1601.1.

Third place went to 16-year-old Jirinia Nekolova of Czechoslovakia with 1580.4 points. The British champion, 17-year-old Jeannette Altwegg of Liverpool, scored 1575.6 points. Fifth went to Alena Vrzanova, 16, Czechoslovakia, 1568.7 and sixth to 17-year-old Yvonne Sherman of New York, 1523.7 despite her fall on the mushy ice.

Touchdown Club Gets Guckeyson Portrait

A portrait of the late Lieut. Bill Guckeyson, one of the University of Maryland's greatest athletes, will be presented by the Maryland Alumni to the Touchdown Club tonight at 6:30.

The presentation will be made by President H. C. Byrd of Maryland to Touchdown Club President Leslie G. Arries. Guckeyson's portrait will be placed in the club's hall of fame alongside such football greats as Tuffy Leemans, Bronko Nagurski, Jim Thorpe and the late Nile Kinnick.

Phila. Golf May 13-16

Philadelphia, Feb. 15 (AP).—The fifth annual Philadelphia Inquirer Invitation Golf tournament will be held at the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club, May 13-16.

NYU Cagers Had Course In Running

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

ARMORY FANS saw one of the runningest teams in basketball Saturday night in N.Y.U. and the Violets didn't get that way accidentally. Les MacMitchell, the great miler and NYU alumnus, helped Coach Howard Cann condition the NYU courtmen. . . . Neighborhood theaters of Virginia tendered Nat Pitcher Walter Masterson a farewell party Friday. Masterson managed the group's Glebe theater this winter. . . . Middleweight Smuggy Hursey, of Washington, has been prepping for his Sonny Horne bout here next week by boxing with Ray Robinson and Gene Burton in New York. . . . The Philadelphia Warriors can blame their slump on the Washington Capitols. The Caps did a bang-up job on Joe Fulks in Philly Feb. 5 and Mr. Basketball hasn't played a game since. He received a bad leg injury. . . . Jimmy Conzelman, Chicago Cardinal coach, told friends at the Georgetown dinner here recently that his team spent more time practicing defense than offense this year. . . .

WE BOOTED one in our yarn Sunday about Feerick leaving the Caps to coach basketball at San Jose State College. It's the San Jose pro club of the California League that has Bob singing "California, Here I Come" . . . Wanting no more of the Lee Q. Murray incident, Matchmaker Gabe Menendez quickly threw out the Billy Brown-Ken Stribling bout Thursday when he learned Brown had been stopped in two rounds the previous evening by Roy "Cyclone" Williams in Binghamton . . . Mike Uline receives over $17,000 for television rights to his hockey and basketball games at Uline Arena . . . Not one of the four Cassidy brothers was in the starting lineup when the Georgetown hockey team played Lehigh last week.

A G st. operative reports that George Washington football people are screening gridmen Assistant Coach Tim Swett lined up on his recent swing through the Southwest. . . . Although he's considered the best lightweight college boxer in the country, Maryland's Andy Quattrocchi has no intention of turning pro. Too tough, he says. . . . The Washington Bears are reassembling for their Thursday night game against the New York Rens at Uline's. The Bears broke up in December after the Rens shellacked them at Turner's Arena.

Ken Stribling 2-1 Favorite Tonight Against Kid Wolfe

Ken Stribling and Delmas "Kid" Wolfe will swap punches in the ten-round main bout tonight at Turner's Arena.

Stribling is a 2-1 favorite although in their previous meeting, Wolfe decisioned Stribling in a six-rounder.

Wolfe's supporters contend Stribling has been dodging the Kid, and feel Wolfe will have little trouble trouncing Ken for the second time.

In Stribling's camp, the opinion is that Ken's potent right hand will put Wolfe away long before the tenth round. Stribling recently has victories over Frank Lacey and Johnny Walker.

Ken originally was slated to face Billy Brown, of Hartford, tonight, but Brown's decisive defeat in Binghamton, N. Y., last week caused the matchmakers to substitute Wolfe.

In supporting bouts, Bob Eisler and Rudy Franklin meet in a five rounder; Tob Reed faces Sam Jefferson in another five and Puggy Lyons clashes with Bobby Suma in the opening four. Four-round bouts will be added to the card, which starts at 8:45 o'clock.

Warner Leads Highs' Scorers

Wally Warner, Anacostia's 6-foot 3-inch center, who scored 13 points against Roosevelt last Friday, has a 17-point lead in the interhigh scoring championship scramble.

He has 100 points in six games, and only one more to play.

However, the race for second place should be interesting. Behind Jimmy Pantos of Central, who tallied 14 against Western Friday, are Wilson's Jack Whitcomb and Western's Wayne Brizendine; each scored 19. Pantos now has 83 points, Whitcomb has 82 and Brizendine, 80.

Warner has chucked in the most field goals, 40, and his points-per-game average is highest with 16.7. His 40 field goals were made in 103 shots from the floor for a .370 percentage.

Brizendine has drawn the most foul shots, 48, and committed the most personal fouls, 22. He has also made the most foul shots, 22.

Billy Paugh of Roosevelt, has the best percentage from the foul line with 9 made out of 11 tries.

D. C. Duckpinners Score in Eastern

Willimantic, Conn., Feb. 15 (AP). Wilbur Carmody, 42-year-old New Haven YMCA alley manager, today captured the eighteenth annual Eastern Duckpin bowling classic here. His 15-game total was 2066, worth top prize of $500. He led a record field of 117 entrants.

Lee Seim of Annapolis, Md., was runner-up with 2002, good for 250, and he was followed by Cletus Pannell of Washington, D. C., whose 1974 won him 200.

Other Washington, D. C., entrants included Karl Gochenour, with 1938, who won 47.50, and Joe Burger, with 1926 for a $35 return.

First Base Is Majors' Big Concern

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Baseball's biggest spring headache will be right around first base.

List the great first basemen in the game today and you've got Johnny Mize of the Giants and Stan Musial of the Cardinals. Hank Greenberg, if he lights some place, is over the hill as a man of distinction.

At Detroit, they're talking about George Vico, who failed at first base last spring. Tony Lupien, who missed with the Phillies, is top hope of the Chicago White Sox. Ed Stevens may be Pittsburgh's best. It's either Eddie Robinson or Elbie Fletcher, late of the Pirates, at first for Cleveland. Old George McQuinn of the Yankees hauled off the scrap heap last season, may lose his job to Bobby Brown, a third baseman.

The Dodgers would like to find some one so Jackie Robinson could move off the bag, but Jackie hasn't much hope. First sackers are mighty scarce these days.

OUTFIELDERS who can throw are scarce, too, reports Rapid Robert Feller of the Cleveland Indians. Pitchers usually are worried about the throwing arms of their outfielders, because hitters always are taking an extra base against weak-throwing outfielders.

"Who can throw these days?" he wants to know. "The DiMaggio boys of New York and Boston sure can. Tommy Henrich, Charley Keller and all the Yankees can. They've got a corner on good throwing arms. But who else is there?

"When anybody hits me," he grinned, "I just automatically run over and back up second base."

Well, with all that speed he's got, Feller is hit hard, anyway, when the batters get to him.

Some experts figure the outfielders just don't practice enough on their throwing. The big dough is in hitting.

Maryland Host to Virginia Tonight; G. W., A. U. Travel

George Washington, Maryland and American U. basketball teams see action tonight, with only Maryland playing at home.

G. W. travels to Lexington, Va., to meet Washington and Lee, while American's Eagles face Western Maryland at Westminster, Md.

For George Washington, the game with Washington and Lee will offer a nice opportunity for revenge. W. & L., regarded as one of the weak sisters in the Southern Conference, turned in a major upset by whipping the Colonials, 73-72, earlier this month at the Armory.

A foul shot by Freddie Vinson in the last eight seconds gave W. & L. victory and handed G. W. its third loss in conference play. The following night, W. & L. reverted to form and was swamped by Maryland, 64-38, and G. W. then trounced the Terps, 65-49, a few nights later.

Maryland's improving team barely lost to powerful North Carolina, 51-47, in its last start, but in Virginia the Terps play host to a club that beat them by 20 points in the first meeting between the teams at Charlottesville in January.

Virginia had little trouble winning, 64-44, but Maryland has come a long way since that shellacking. Despite the loss of high scoring Bill Wanish, Maryland fans feel that the scrappy Terps will take Virginia tonight.

With one victory over Western Maryland under their belts, the Eagles of American don't expect too much difficulty in this evening's game. Encouraged by their fine showing against Muhlenberg on the Mules' floor and sparked by the newly found scoring prowess of husky Bob Lamon, American is doing far better than its supporters hoped after Reggie Crockett, Bart Fugler and Don Hillock quit the team.

Tech Plays Alumni In Basketball Tonight

The Tech High varsity basketball team will meet an all-star alumni quintet tonight at 8 o'clock in the Tech gym.

Sponsored by the Tech Circle T Club, the game's proceeds will be used by the club to further athletics at the school. In a preliminary game, midget teams from the Trinidad Boys Club and Police Boys Club No. 12 will play.

Failure of the foot-and-mouth disease prevention program in Mexico threatens the meat and milk supply of our entire nation. While we would still have meat and dairy products, even with foot-and-mouth disease in our country, the supply would be short and price high. The following is a digest of an important article in the March issue of the* FARM JOURNAL

FOOT AND MOUTH FAILURE

by PAUL FRIGGENS, Associate Editor, FARM JOURNAL

WE HAVE LOST the fight to wipe out foot-and-mouth disease in Mexico.

Eight months after the United States launched its ambitious $35 million campaign, our eradication program is stopped dead, with no immediate prospect of resumption.

American livestock men, therefore, must be prepared to operate with the disease next door, and a constant threat for a long time to come—how long, nobody knows.

"Aftosa," as they call foot-and-mouth in Mexico, may jump our borders at any time. It's a miracle, in fact, that it hasn't already. If it does, the United States stands ready to stamp it out by slaughter, as it did before.

But even a single outbreak will mean serious loss, such as state quarantined against state, and the halting of all shipments of livestock and dangerous animal products. A general outbreak could threaten the whole $8 billion dollar American livestock industry.

WE ARE BEING OUTFLANKED

Because Mexico forced us to stop slaughter—the only known way to eradicate foot-and-mouth disease—the United States is falling back to a quarantine line 750 miles across central Mexico. But, like the vaunted Maginot line, it can and is being outflanked.

Meanwhile, the United States has agreed to vaccination, but vaccine never has been known to eradicate the disease in any country.

The Mexicans want the Americans to build two five-wire fences across malarial jungle and desert and mountains. But disease heeds no fence.

The inescapable truth is that we are worse off today than when we started. When we went into Mexico, we had only the disease to deal with—and a fighting chance to lick it. Today we have more disease, plus the animosity of the Mexican people, and the opposition of the politicians.

These are the blunt facts I found, myself, in Mexico—amidst the conflict and confusion of the Aftosa Commission offices. I talked to dozens of persons throughout the infected area, where Uncle Sam is pulling out altogether in order to try to hold the disease where it was February 1—only 300 miles from United States borders.

This is one time that Uncle Sam apparently bit off more than he could chew—at least the way he went at it. In fairness, it must be said that Aftosa has not yet broken out in the United States. Our $35 million has forestalled that, so far. Another factor in our favor is that the natural movement of Mexican trade is not northward, but towards Mexico City.

A MOTLEY ARMY—AND CONFUSION

Eradicating Aftosa in Mexico probably is the toughest job that veterinary science ever tackled. We relied on a corps of laboratory research men and professional veterinarians, plus a hastily recruited crew of Americans and Mexicans from all walks of life to do the job.

Few of the Americans understood Mexico or Mexicans, or even spoke the language. The doctors were all right—among the world's best—but it's been suggested that they could have used an Eisenhower in command.

The Aftosa Commission and the United States Department of Agriculture kept telling Americans at home that "final success" was just around the corner.

The facts were that American personnel feared for their own lives in Mexico, and had no doubt at all that the program was doomed.

Aftosa was first reported in December, 1946. The United States soon closed the border, but six months were consumed in endless negotiations before we as much as landed a single blow. When we did get going, the disease had spread to 16 Mexican states.

Our method was to throw a ring around the infected area and to squeeze the disease out by slaughter of all infected and exposed animals—cattle, hogs, sheep, and goats. Instead, the disease squeezed out the veterinarians.

The United States, in its worst outbreak of foot-and-mouth, slaughtered only 172,000 animals. The campaign in Mexico called for killing 50,000 cattle a week and a like number of smaller animals—400,000 a month. There are roughly 7,000,000 cattle still in the infected zone today.

But Aftosa's wildfire spread was only the beginning of our problem. We were compelled to fight against overwhelming obstacles of Mexican custom, superstition, language, rumor, and political manipulation.

Most of the people live in communal villages, from which they drive their animals to a common pasture and back home at night. They have done this for centuries.

Everywhere I went I saw the Mexican and his burro. Apparently, they travel at all times of the day and night and, unwittingly, man and burro helped spread Aftosa in Mexico. Next to the terrain, the second greatest obstacle to our program in Mexico was the Mexican himself.

Consider the problem. Mexico has 24,000,000 population. But great numbers in the rural areas are Indian. Many do not even speak Spanish. When Dr. Francis Mulhern went into Oaxaca state to locate a southern quarantine line, he found Indians who couldn't understand each other, let alone understand what Aftosa was all about.

To be sure, not all of rural Mexico is as wild as Mulhern found it. Mexico also has broad, fertile valleys, and some of the richest land on earth. You may even see an occasional tractor. But everywhere the Americans found distrust, rumor and political opposition.

Mexico has not forgotten two American invasions within a century, nor does the sight of ten gallon hats, cowboy boots and Texas license plates advertising the Alamo help to soothe inter-American relations.

In this soil the first seeds of our defeat were sown. On the night that I arrived at San Luis Potosi traveling along the northern quarantine line, the mercury dipped to a new low for Mexico, and it was bitter cold. There had been snow at Christmas, the first snow in 35 years. The story was that Americans, probably monkeying with dry ice, were responsible for Mexico's unseasonable weather. The naturally superstitious average Mexican in the rural areas believed it.

He believed other rumors more vicious: that airplanes from the United States had deliberately spread Aftosa, that Uncle Sam wanted to kill Mexico's cattle to destroy its meat industry, that even the soda ash disinfectant American veterinarians used was a mysterious powder that carried Aftosa and all manner of other fatal diseases.

YOU HAVE TO SEE THE "PRESIDENTE"

The United States' program started with one of the most cumbersome pieces of administrative machinery ever devised.

For every American official, for every American doctor, for every American appraiser, paymaster, technician, and general handyman, there was a Mexican counterpart. Then the governor and each little town's presidente, and often the padre, had to be consulted. On top of all this were superimposed the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the State Department, and the Mexican government. A doctor at one of the quarantine outposts said: "It got so that whether you wanted a bulldozer or a broom you had to go into negotiation."

And while the United States and Mexico negotiated, Aftosa swept across Mexico northward toward the United States, and southward toward Guatemala.

Despite all this, however, the Americans began to make headway and eventually struck hard against the disease. Remembering that we started six months late, it was a splendid effort. By fall we had 1,500 pieces of heavy equipment on the ground—boats, bulldozers, mobile machine shops, weapon carriers, jeeps and cranes. Two thousand men were on the payroll, and we had started the slaughter of 1,000,000 head of animals.

At the start, the United States agreed to pay for all cattle slaughtered while the Mexicans were to pay for all hogs, sheep and goats. The first thing American officials knew, the Mexican campesino was refusing to bring in his cattle because he said he had not yet been paid for the smaller animals killed.

The other extreme was the Mexican official who presented claims for "1,000 purebred Poland China hogs" he said were slaughtered, worth 1,000 pesos each about $200. When the government opened the trenches, they found less than 50 pigs and pretty poor ones at that.

CATTLE HIDDEN IN THE MOUNTAINS

In view of all this, it was not long before the Mexicans were driving their animals far back into the mountains, not only defeating the slaughter program but spreading the disease further.

In October, the United States took over the payment of all animals—an average of $50 for cattle and $5 for small animals. The campesino led in his cattle, including his treasured oxen, the animals were shot, the campesino signed with thumb print and was paid off (and joined his companions).

With every shot, the tension heightened. Women and children crawled on their hands and knees to cry over the dead oxen. If 200 owners were involved, many hundreds of campesinos might turn up to see the killing. Some would walk 40 miles to see "Aftosa," and, of course, carry the disease back home.

Under guard of Mexican troops, Americans shot the animals, then slashed the hides to prevent salvage and speed decomposition. Afterward, the Americans sometimes found their jeep tires slashed.

One thing had been overlooked: no money on earth could repay the small Mexican farmer for his yoke of oxen. He loved his animals. Oxen worked his land, fed his children, provided his clothes. They were, as one Mexican told me, a part of the family.

"THE GRINGOS SHOT MY CATTLE"

To see them kicking and squirming in a slaughter pit, shot by "Gringos," was more than he could stand. He went home in hate, and this hate, fanned by local propagandists and anti-American elements, boiled up to help lick the United States in Mexico.

"First, you come and kill our cattle. Next, you will come and kill my wife and children," the campesinos told American veterinarians.

Another obstacle was that while Aftosa cripples and seriously injures an animal, the mortality is low—3 to 5%. "I get sick lots of times and nobody kills me," says the Mexican Indian. "Why kill my cow?"

But for every farmer who cooperated, there were 10 to 100 or maybe 1,000 campesinos with their treasured oxen who did not—and may never—understand the necessity of slaughter and modern quarantine.

THIS WAS THE BEGINNING OF THE END

At Senguio village in Michoacan on September 1, Uncle Sam's foot-and-mouth eradication program definitely went on the rocks.

On September 1, Dr. Augusto Juarez Medina, a Mexican veterinarian, and seven soldiers were pulled from their jeep and hacked to pieces. Eight Mexicans gave their lives that day, because an infuriated, propagandized mob had been told that the United States was not paying a just price for cattle. We are lucky that no Americans have been killed in Mexico. Some have been shot at.

The story of Senguio swept through Mexico's back country even faster than the "Aftosa." Hundreds of miles away in widely separated communities, veterinarians suddenly sensed a fresh hostility. On one day, a doctor told me, an entire village had agreed to bring in its infected cattle for slaughter. The next day, after the Senguio killing, the campesinos would have nothing to do with the Americans.

THE GOVERNMENT GIVES UP

In Mexico City, the American section moved swiftly to withdraw its forces from the infected area until things quieted down. Simultaneously, the Mexican government pressed for a complete stop of slaughter on the grounds that Mexico could not stand the economic impact.

We had killed nearly 1,000,000 animals, almost half of which were cattle. On November 26th, the United States agreed to the Mexican demand and slaughter stopped.

So we were licked. Barring a miracle of science, foot-and-mouth disease is saddled on Mexico indefinitely.

Let's look at the alternative. First take quarantine.

The United States has fallen back to a quarantine line which runs from Tampico in the jungle region of the Gulf coast westward across central Mexico to San Luis Potosi, Zacatecas, thence through Jalisco and Nayarit states to Puerto Vallarta on the Pacific coast.

Some say we should have tackled the disease from this point in the first place, pushing our drive southwards. But the quarantine line runs through impenetrable jungle, across vast stretches of arid, rocky lands, over 10,000-foot mountains, down a canyon which some say is greater than the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, and to the sea.

For hundreds of miles you can travel this line by motor road in the more accessible areas. I traveled from Valles to San Luis Potosi and saw Mexican soldiers on an average of once every 40 miles.

Cattle wandered back and forth across the road that marked the quarantine line. I was told that the Mexican army had decided to drop a new and shorter south line, which explained the few soldiers I had seen.

"QUARANTINE" IS A FARCE

At best a Mexican soldier must have little heart for his task. He gets less than a dollar a day on which he must feed himself. I saw soldiers with their families, mind you, living in crude huts by the roadside, in lonely villages, in the jungles. Some complained to me they had had no pay for some time. And this is the military force that backs up our northern quarantine line!

At one point, I asked a Mexican civilian employe of the Aftosa Commission how many cattle passed the quarantine line the previous night. "About 100," he told me blithely. If you have the right permit in Mexico, you can go anywhere.

A few days before I left Mexico, the Aleman government dispatched a propaganda truck to the quarantine zone to explain the need for possible slaughter. Mexicans stoned the truck. Others have even refused to have their cattle inspected. In some sections, Mexican cattlemen with bigger herds and who fear the spread of Aftosa are cooperating splendidly. But there is always the campesino with his oxen and the "Gringo" hater in the hills.

Moreover, northbound truck traffic is a constant hazard.

FENCES? VACCINES? WHAT?

The fence question goes along with quarantine. The Mexicans want the United States to build two 750-mile five-wire fences from the Gulf to the Pacific. But I came away with the feeling that a lot of fence might be a bad thing. Two fences might serve to weaken our vigilance, and destroy that of the Mexicans altogether.

That leaves vaccine which the United States had always refused to consider. Vaccine never has been known to lick foot-and-mouth disease. It has been widely used in South America and Europe but it has not stamped out the disease. In South America, stockmen vaccinate and are resigned to at least a 20% annual loss from foot-and-mouth disease.

The United States could never tolerate that loss. Imagine what a sudden outbreak might do to the Iowa cattle feeder or the Colorado cattlemen ready to ship and on short grass!

But we are going ahead with vaccines because Mexico has forced our hand.

Dr. M. S. Shahan, co-director of the fight in Mexico, is an outstanding authority on vaccine. "The truth is," he says, "that there is no immediate prospect of a better vaccine than those now available."

The amazing thing is that after previous outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease in the United States—one covering twenty-two states—we are caught flatfooted without a better solution than slaughter. Now, our Bureau of Animal Industry is working with world authorities on the problem and is laying out both short-term and long-term research programs. It will be up to Congress to decide what to do about them.

This much Congress should know: Mexico is saddled with foot-and-mouth disease indefinitely.

We are not even sure we can control it. Available vaccines don't eradicate. American agriculture and American science, therefore, are challenged as never before to think up something better. The United States cannot afford to harbor foot-and-mouth disease next door forever.

Dr. Shahan and his co-workers of the Department of Agriculture think that an all-out research program is the answer. Research, though, means untold millions of dollars for years to come. And what about Aftosa meantime?

Right now, the 1200 miles of critical international boundary between Brownsville and El Paso, Texas, are guarded only 14 hours a day. Until recently, it was only seven.

On the other hand, many argue that the best thing to do is to hold the line in Mexico where we are right now—at any cost—until research does come up with a better solution than slaughter, say a life-time-immunity vaccine. It would be cheaper in any event than letting the disease get into the United States.

Other plans have been offered. One of the most thoughtful is the proposal of Robert J. Kleberg, Jr., president of the famous King Ranch is southern Texas.

"Aftosa," says Kleberg, "is as close to Americans right now as their dinner plates." He would clear out a clean zone along the northern quarantine line, move the infected stock to the south or salvage by slaughter and replace them, after 60 days, with vaccinated animals from the clean ranching areas of the north. Kleberg would then repeat the process moving to the south as fast as feasible. It might take ten years to do this. It would be worth it, Kleberg believes.

One argument against his plan is that the replacement alone might involve 20,000,000 animals, and the same conditions that defeated the original program might work against this one. In a single village I found that 220 head of cattle were owned by 168 farmers who use a common watering place. That's the measure of our problem.

One of the world's greatest corps of veterinarians; that never lost a battle up to now, seems licked. Yet they take a philosophic view. I asked one what he thought about it all. He said:

"Just this: whatever we do, we have to keep doing the job that best serves both the Mexican and American people."

That's our job—but it is later than we think!

THERE'S BEEN PLENTY OF WARNING

Back in January, 1947, FARM JOURNAL warned its readers of this disease threat. Six times during 1947, FARM JOURNAL carried up-to-the-minute articles on the foot-and-mouth disease in Mexico and its danger to livestock in the U.S. To obtain a first-hand picture of the situation, a FARM JOURNAL editor, Paul Friggens, recently visited Mexico. His full report appears in the March issue of FARM JOURNAL.

HERE'S WHAT FARM JOURNAL IS DOING ABOUT IT

We are keeping our 2,650,000 subscribers constantly informed of this danger. Reprints of this advertisement have been sent to all members of Congress—to all State governors—to the entire livestock industry—to county agents and to leaders throughout the foods industry.

AND THE FIGHT MUST GO ON!

The government must have sufficient funds and manpower to prevent this dread disease from spreading over the Mexican-U.S.A. border. Your nation's food supply is threatened.

New Plan Drawn Up To Give $500 Average Pay Raise to 800,000

PAY PLAN: It's supposed to be a deep secret, but a new and powerfully supported plan has been drawn up to give pay raises to the 800,000 Federal employes whose salaries are fixed by the Classification. Briefly, it recommends:

1. A complete overhauling of that act, which was passed in 1923.

2. An average increase of about $500 to the 800,000 employes by stepping up their salary grades. However, many increases would be more and others considerably less.

3. That the proposed new classification system range in salaries from a minimum of $2200 for a CAF-1 employe to $15,000 in the top bracket. This compares with $1756 for a CAF-1 now and a top of $10,000.

4. That the new system wipe out the overlapping salary grades now in effect. For example, the present salary range of a CAF-2 is from $1954 to $2394, the latter figure happens to be the starting salary for a CAF-4. In other words, a top-bracket CAF-2 who is paid $2394 could be "promoted" to a CAF-3 job and be compelled to take a salary cut. The starting CAF-3 salary is $2168.

5. That there be one schedule of pay rates and one general category to cover all Classification Act people. The act now divides Federal employes into five groups, Clerical, Administrative and Fiscal (CAF); Professional (P), Subprofessional (SP), Clerical-Mechanical Service (CMS), and Craft-Protective and Custodial CPC).

The cost of the proposed plan is estimated to be about 425 million dollars a year. This is by far cheaper than any pay bill now before Congress. The flat $1000 pay bill would cost 800 million dollars a year for Classification Act People, and the many flat $800 bills would cost about 640 million dollars.

The President, in his budget message, estimated it would cost 950 million dollars a year to give Classification Act employes and postal workers a cost-of-living pay raise. This would average out at about $650 per year per employe.

The Classification Act revision would average out about $500 per employe per year, or an average percentage increase of about 16 per cent. The average salary of the Classification Act employe is slightly under $3000.

When it's considered that the cost of living has gone up 67 per cent and the average Classification Act salary only 32 per cent since 1940, the average increase of 16 per cent is the minimum Federal employes should be asked to accept. However, I can reveal that a higher percentage increase was considered 10 days ago, but the commodity market slump brought a downward revision.

This pay plan is one you'll be hearing a great deal about in the months to come. It will be unveiled in a few weeks, and when it is, it will have a long list of influential supporters. The proposal, incidentally, is not out of line with the suggestion of Senator Taft, the GOP Senate leader, that Federal salaries be raised 60 per cent above the prewar level.

UPWA: A bitter fight is brewing to gain control of the Federal worker part of the left-wing United Public Workers (CIO) when it's again made independent. The Commie line rulers of UPWA are determined to continue their control over the Federal union. The non-Communists in Federal ranks are just as determined to take it over. They will oppose any person for office in the Federal union who is a left-winger or has played along with them.

NOTES: Civil Service loyalty review board will meet again on March 2. Several new members will be seated at that time. The board will consider a plan to handle the cases of State Department employes who appeal to it. . . . Navy's Bureau of Ordnance is tops in its March of Dimes collection. A total of $1065 was collected, an average of $1.06 per employe . . . Ross Pancoast wears the distinguished civilian service medal for his outstanding service as chairman of Army Ordnance's price adjustment board.

PATENT: Elton H. Brown yesterday celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary as chief of Patent's public search office. He's credited with a most remarkable memory. Brown is in charge of the 2,500,000 patents that have been issued. Many a patent-seeker goes to Brown before he begins a long and tedious search. Frequently, Brown can tell him whether a patent has been issued on his brainchild. Brown started in the Patent Office when he was 14.

NOTES: Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.) and Representative Butler (R., N. Y.) have teamed up on a bill to raise the travel allowance for railway mail clerks from $4 to $6 a day. . . . The Office of the Housing Expediter and the Rent Control Office have issued layoff notices to all of their employes. The notices were a safety-measure device in event Congress fails to extend rent and building controls beyond February 29. . . . Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, will speak on Classification Act changes tomorrow night in the Archives auditorium. The host is the Society for Personnel Administration.

Speaker Here Labels UMT 'Operation Goosestep'

Former California Legal Chief Says Military Prepares Minds for War III

Universal military training was called "Operation Goosestep" last night by Robert W. Kenny, former Attorney General of California.

Speaking before more than a 1000 youths at a meeting of the National Youth Assembly Against Universal Military Training at Turner's Arena, Kenny said there was no military necessity for UMT.

Instead, he said, American military authorities are "just getting ou minds ready for World War III."

Earlier, UMT was termed "another step toward war" by the Rev. John Darr of New York at an open meeting of the youth assembly.

Darr, 29-year-old Congregationalist minister who heads the youth group organized in December, said the United States was fast becoming a "police state."

His address at Turner's Arena opened the assembly's two-day organizational conference. More than 2000 delegates from religious, educational and veterans' organizations throughout the country are attending.

Brig. Gen. Herbert C. Holdridge, USA, retired, candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination on a "Peoples Program," asserted at the same meeting that UMT legislation would set up a "Hitler youth movement" in this country.

GSI Denies Army Police Use in Strike

About 1000 persons attended a mass meeting for striking workers in the GSI cafeteria dispute yesterday, at which the strikers condemned the alleged use of military police at Arlington Farms yesterday morning.

Alfred Bernstein, director of negotiations for Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers (UPWA-CIO), said the group, which met in closed session, heard a report that military police had been used "for the first time" yesterday to escort persons to and from the picket lines at the Farms.

J. C. Niehuss, personnel director of GSI and head of negotiations for them, when informed of the group's action, flatly denied that military police were on the Farms grounds yesterday.

He said GSI had not requested any assistance from the military and that early yesterday there were no guards of any kind at Arlington Farms.

Niehuss explained, however, that there was a "fairly large concentration" of strikers there, and that Public Buildings Administration guards took "preventive measures" after some strikers attempted to chase workers in the cafeteria there.

Georgetown Has Its Rugged Individualist

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Rolling-Stone Cabinetmaker Uncured After 11-Year Stand

George M. Howe muses as he sprinkles Bull Durham and rolls another, "I'm one of those rolling stones—never got much moss or polish either."

The 66-year-old cabinetmaker looks out of his Georgetown shop at 3207 O st. nw., where he has worked and lived for 11 years and insists he still "has an itchy foot."

His dress is always the same—baseball cap, Army pants, and no socks.

The contrast of his quarters to the plush sophisticated shops of Georgetown is an invitation to walk in. One cannot see much through the window except vines hanging from the ceiling—"It gives moisture for my lathe."

The little unventilated room is cluttered with sawdust, shavings and furniture. Chairs hang from the ceiling. Some he will repair. Some he took in to please antique fans who "pestered" him. Some he bought to get rid of annoying persons.

Howe has to like customers before he works for them. "Positively no more work taken from Government clerks," his wall sign reads. He explains that he disliked the New Deal and its employes. But Howe admits he occasionally finds a passable one and ignores his sign.

His interest in wood turning began as a child in Twin Mountains, N. H. He watched his uncles, one a carriage-maker, the other a wheelwright.

An orphan at 14, he began his wandering, interrupting it only long enough to serve his apprenticeship back in New England.

When he first came to Washington 15 years ago telephones bothered him. In Georgetown it was worse. Before the first week was out, he ripped out the pesky phone—used a pay station to inform central he was "fed up."

"A guy came out from the telephone company and told me I couldn't do business six months without a phone. Well, I've never gone hungry yet, except when someone keeps me from getting to the lunch room."

Besides work, his habits are coffee and tobacco. Howe drinks about 14 cups a day—"I've lived on coffee so many years, milk would probably kill me." He hasn't smoked a "tailored-made cigarette" in 20 years.

A stern philosophy against borrowing and lending—"I'm tough as hay if some young bum puts the bee on me"—does not keep him from helping the needy.

There is no Mrs. Howe. "The ones I wanted didn't want me, and the ones I didn't want wanted me. I like to travel light. The best thing about any place I live is that I can pack.

Anniversary Rite Held at Maine Mast

Sinking 50 Years Ago Commemorated By Veteran Groups

National and local veterans' groups observed the fiftieth anniversary of the sinking of the United States battleship Maine in Havana harbor, at an hour-long ceremony held yesterday at Arlington National Cemetery.

The ceremony dedicated to the memory of the incident leading to the outbreak of the Spanish-American War was sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary of the Spanish-American War Veterans' Potomac department.

Lieut. George L. Williams, USN, a White House aide, opened the ceremonies by placing President Truman's wreath at the base of the Maine's mast, now at Arlington. Lieut. Col. Eduardo Martin, Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, presented the Cuban Ambassador's wreath.

Thomas A. F. Leathers, national junior vice commander of the Army-Navy Union, led the union's 18 delegates to honor 36 members of their garrisons who are buried at the base of the monument, together with 232 other soldiers.

Representatives of other organizations were: Chaplain J. W. Rice of the American Legion, Albert M. Armstrong, departmental commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and National Commander Cassidey of the Irish War Veterans.

Thousands Mark Date At Shaft in Havana

Havana, Feb. 15 (AP).—Cubans and Americans joined today in observing the fiftieth anniversary of the sinking of the U. S. S. Maine in Havana Harbor.

Thousands gathered at the marble shaft on Seawall Drive commemorating victims of the sinking, which started the Spanish-American War bringing independence to Cuba.

Cuban President Ramon Grau San Martin said:

"We are not here solely to express the testimony of our admiration and our grief for the loss of so many fine lives on the Maine but also to render homage to the friendship uniting the peoples of Cuba and the United States."

Other speakers included U. S. Ambassador R. Henry Norweb and Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. M.) Among those present were Spanish War veterans from both countries and American sailors from the Key West base.

Sharon Learns, Second Time, to Walk—at 3

The Washington Post

IT'LL TAKE TIME—Sharon Meenehan, 3, with the assistance of her mother, Mrs. Frank Meenehan, 2813 39th st. nw., is learning to walk all over again. Three months ago the child, in a traffic accident, fractured both legs, hip, skull and neck

It takes a lot of grit to learn to walk again, on legs shriveled by heavy plaster casts, but 3-year-old Sharon Meenehan is a lucky girl.

For three days now she has been taking halting steps with the help of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Meenehan of 2813 39th st. nw.

Only three months ago, Sharon was in critical condition at Georgetown Hospital. Both her legs, her right hip and ankle, her skull and neck had been fractured when she was struck by an automobile in front of her home.

Yesterday, wearing a "dress-up" outfit for the first time since the accident, she showed visitors what a brave girl can accomplish.

With her 7-month-old sister, Diane, as a goal, Sharon took a dozen steps across the room and back again.

Then, sitting cross-legged on the floor, she concentrated with little-girl interest on the cake, candy and ballon some friends had brought her from a birthday party.

Sharon's parents realize her full recovery will be a slow, tedious process, but they consider it a miracle that she can walk at all.

Sharon, herself, isn't quite sure what it is all about, but she knows one thing—it will be a long time before she goes out into the street again.

Temple Names 2 District Men as Honorary Member

Two Washington men were named honorary members of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhood's board at a final session of the organization's four-day biennial convention in the Hotel Shoreham yesterday.

Those honored were Allen V. de Ford, general chairman, and Harold Strauss, vice chairman of the convention.

Joseph Finkelstein of Brooklyn, newly elected treasurer of the federation-sponsored Jewish Chautauqua Society, urged delegates to increase membership and funds for work of the organization.

Hearing Opens Today On Six District Bills; 24 Have Say on 'Rule'

House District Group to Decide Whether, When Bill Will Go to Floor

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Twenty-four members of the House will have the first major decision on how far Washington home rule legislation is to go.

They are the members of the House District Committee headed by Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.). The key decisions on whether a home rule bill is to be sent to the House floor for action, and what kind of a bill it may be, will be in their hands.

So far, the major job of drafting a home rule plan in bill form has been in the hands of a seven-member District Subcommittee headed by Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.). The subcommittee still has custody of the home rule bill, and plans to review and revise it before presenting it to the full District Committee.

As now written, the bill would give Washington an elected 12-member city council, and an 8-member elected school board. The council would appoint a city manager in charge of 12 streamlined city departments. The school board would run the schools and libraries. The council would have ordinance—and budget—making powers, but it would have to prepare major District legislation as a "proposal" to be sent to Congress. Council "proposals" would become law unless vetoed by either House or by the President.

In the subcommittee, the bill has bipartisan, although not yet unanimous, backing, but a number of changes are likely to be made. Pending the changes, the lineup in the full District Committee on the home rule plan is not yet settled.

Are Residents "Sold"?

Among the major questions being raised by some members is whether Washington residents are sufficiently sold on the home rule plan.

For example, Representative John L. McMillan, a member of the Home Rule Subcommittee, former chairman of the full House District Committee and now its ranking Democratic member, told a radio audience last week that he had received only three letters on home rule.

McMillan said yesterday that his comment brought some reaction. He said he has received about 25 more letters and about 15 phone calls. The sentiments they expressed on home rule were divided, he said, but he has made no tally of them.

McMillan said he is particularly anxious to know what the people who own property and have a real stake in Washington feel about home rule. He said he is not yet satisfied that they favor the home-rule bill.

He said he will continue to welcome the letters and suggestions.

The dearth of mail on home rule has been general among the members of the House District Committee, a checkup of their offices showed yesterday.

A few reported receiving as many as 10 or a dozen letters. Some said they had received none at all. Some said the only mail they had received in connection with home rule was from anti-vivisection groups protesting any disruption of the present District pound services. None is planned Auchincloss said.

Serving with Auchincloss and McMillan on the Home Rule subcommittee are Representatives Robert N. McGarvey (R., Pa.) John J. Allen, jr. (R., Calif.) Homer R. Jones (R., Wash.) Charles B. Deane (D., N. C.) and Robert E. Jones, jr. (D., Ala.).

Other Republicans on the full District Committee are Representatives George J. Bates (Mass.), Sid Simpson (Ill.), J. Glenn Beall (Md.), Joseph P. O'Hara (Minn.), Henry O. Talle (Iowa), A. L. Miller (Nebr.), John McDowell (Pa.), Gregory McMahon (N. Y.) and Harold F. Youngblood (Mich.).

Others on the Democratic side of the committee are Oren Harris (Ark.), Thomas G. Abernethey (Miss.), Howard W. Smith (Va.), Arthur G. Klein (N. Y.), Olin E. Teague (Tex.), John F. Kennedy (Mass.) and James C. Davis (Ga.).

Ice-Ca-Puddles

4 Boys Eye Sun Eyeing Their Igloo

Four youngsters in Arlington County are very much concerned with the state of the weather these days.

Unlike us oldsters, they're rooting for sharp, cold weather.

Too much of this balmy weather, they know, will convert the igloo they have built at 4215 Lorcum lane, near Cherrydale, into an ignomonious puddle of ice water.

Job of Several Weeks

Billy Wine, 13, of the Lorcum lane address, was the straw (or should it be snow?) boss in charge of constructing the igloo. Billy explained yesterday that he and his three companions spent several weeks building the igloo because they had to wait for the snow to become wet enough to pack.

The snow house was completely constructed of wet blocks about 1 foot long and half a foot thick. Yesterday's warm sun did some damage to the igloo and the boys are worried about additional damage today.

Weather forecast: mild.

As finished, the Larcum lane igloo was just under 6 feet high, and 9-year-old Billy Hackney and his brother Donnie, 13, of 4244 Vacation lane were able to stand up without difficulty. Dick Annand, 13, 4247 Vacation lane, and Billy Wine, taller than the other two, bumped the ceiling if they stood too straight.

The boys wanted to sleep in the house Saturday night, since they maintained it would be warm enough. Parents vetoed the idea.

The Post Poll

Area's Auto Orders Put At 34,700

Residents of the Washington area have placed orders with auto dealers for about 37,400 cars, The Washington Post Poll estimates.

About one family in 10 has an order, and some have ordered more than one car.

Not all of these cars would be bought, however, if the orders came through tomorrow. As things stand now, about 23,400 cars would be accepted and promptly taken off the dealer's hands. But 10,600 definitely would not be bought, and the remaining 3400 are in the doubtful category.

Chief reasons for not buying now are high prcies, multiple orders placed in the hope that one of them would come through sooner, and decision to wait until new models are available.

These findings are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of families living in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Residents were asked:

Does your family have an order in for a new car? (If "yes") If the order came through tomorrow, would you buy the car?

Those who said their families had cars on order were also asked:

Does your family have more than one car on order? How many? (If more than one car on order) If (two) orders came through would you buy both cars?

Answers indicate that:

Of all area families
Have one car on order	9%
Have more than one car on order	1
Do not have an order in	90

23,400 cars on order would be bought if they could be delivered tomorrow.

10,600 cars on order would not be bought if they could be delivered tomorrow.

About 1 in every 10 orders for new cars has been placed by someone who has approached more than one dealer, but intends to buy only one car.

In some cases where orders would not be taken up, the prices of new cars have outstripped the pocketbooks of those who ordered them, while some people say they have now been waiting so long that they might as well wait a little longer and get the new models.

Asked about how long their orders had been in, 27 per cent said they had been waiting less than 6 months; 23 per cent had placed an order for a new car from 6 to 11 months ago; 28 per cent said 1 to 1.9 years; while the orders of 22 per cent were 2 or more years old.

About three of every four orders for new cars have been placed by people who at present own an auto. Most of those who would hold off buying, if delivery could be made tomorrow, are in this class.

New Gorporation Measure Drafted; Officials of Bar, City Will Testify

Public hearing on six bills affecting operation of the District government will begin this morning at 10 o'clock.

The hearing was called by Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) before the House District Judiciary Subcommittee. District Bar Association, city officials and others are slated to testify. The bill would:

1. Give the District a new, modernized law covering establishment and operation of corporations. Senate District Counsel Kirkland explained that the present law carries many restrictions that have discouraged corporations from organizing here. He said the bill would give the District a "modern corporation act." The District Bar Association supports the bill, and has told Congress that almost no corporations have been formed here under the present law in the past 25 years.

2. Remove the present $10,000 ceiling on damages for death "by wrongful act" in the District. The bill would also let juries allocate damages among surviving family members, and include in the damages expenses of the last illness and burial.

3. Change the law of testimony in cases involving a legally incapable person. The bill would let the capable party to a contract testify when one of the original parties has become, since the contract, legally incapable of testifying. But the capable party could not win a suit on his own uncorroborated testimony, and if he or his agency testified, representatives of the incapable party could also testify.

4. Change the law so that a person's right to sue or be sued for damages for physical injury would survive his death.

5. Authorize the District to broaden its boiler inspection service to include hot-water heating boilers, low-pressure steam boilers and draft return, and pressure vessels operating between 15 and 80 pounds.

6. Permit the Imperial Palace, Dramatic Order, Knights of Khorassan, described by District Committee aides as a Masonic organization, to amend its charter so that it could hold five million dollars worth of property instead of $100,000 worth.

O'Hara's group has also scheduled a meeting for 10 a. m. tomorrow to consider the armory control question, and also to review a bill to regulate the practice of professional engineering in the District.

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) has called a meeting for 10 a. m. Friday to hear testimony on the proposed bill to increase penalties for sex offenses, particularly those involving children, and to permit treating criminal sex psycopaths at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Miller's group, the House District Subcommittee on Health, Education, and Recreation, will also meet at 10 a. m. Saturday to review the bill to tighten regulation of optometrists here.

Miller has also called a meeting a week from today on bills to authorize Federal building grants to private hospitals in Washington, and to let the District make more use of the National Training School for Girls by converting it into an industrial training home for Negro girls.

Hackers Ordered To Keep Cabs Clean

100 Warned to Act Immediately or Expect Penalties

Nearly a hundred District taxicabs yesterday were warned to clean up their cabs or "get off the street."

The warnings were issued by Pvt. J. Raymond Turner of the Hack Inspetcor's office, who said he was folliwing a regulation issued by the Public Utilities Commission requiring cabs to be clean, inside and out, at all times.

Turner said that he had noticed the cabs were getting "progressively worse" in appearance during the recent siege of bad weather. He said that although Saturday had been a clear day, he noticed no improvement yesterday in the cab situation.

Turner said he warned 90 cab drivers during the day, but issued no tickets. He said, however, that he took the name of the driver in each case, and will take further action if the cabs are again driven without being cleaned.

Pastor Hits Racial Bias In Congress

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Congressmen with racial prejudices were denounced yesterday by the Rev. Thomas A. Fraser, as Christian brotherhood was stressed at several services.

February 22 will launch the Brotherhood Week observance of the ational Conference of Christians and Jews. President Truman is honorary chairman, and Robert P. Patterson, general chairman, of the national observance. Watson B. Miller heads the observance sponsored by the Washington Roundtable of the National Conference.

Speaking to his St. Paul's Episcopal congregation at Duke and St. Pitt sts., Alexandria, Mr. Fraser declared:

"Anyone who is even vaguely familiar with racial and cultural antagonisms can sympathize with the person who is caught in an emotional prejudice. But when representative of our democratic government, go out of their way to make offensive and insulting remarks about other citizens because of their color we cannot help but feel they are men with impure hearts and that they seek not God and His righteousness but some selfish goal which is totally divorced from God and the Christian religion.

"The consequence of their action is division and hatred. They may claim they are representing the will of the people of a certain area, but it is better to be acceptable in the eyes of the Lord than to be elected to Congress."

Farewells Are Said at Mrs. R.W. Imbrie's Party

By Marie McNair

Small parties are definitely best, guests decided yesterday at Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie's farewell cocktail party for Col. and Mrs. S. Norman Van Meter.

There was opportunity for conversation; space to move from one room to another, and no line forming to get to the buffet.

Colonel Van Meter who is soon to leave for an Air Forces assignment on the West Coast, was alone yesterday for unhappily, Mrs. Van Meter had been kept in New York owing to the serious illness of her mother.

But he kept busy and cheerful tending bar, while ladies from the Turkish Embassy staff took their turn at pouring tea.

Wears Odd Necklace

Katherine Imbrie, whose apartment is filled with beautiful furnishings from the Near East, took time out to explain to one of her guests the origin of the necklace she wore with her simple black frock. Fashioned of tiger's eyes spaced with tiny silver medallions, it had been presented to her by a Turkish Pasha whose photograph was one of the collection of pictures of Turkish friends adorning a small table in the foyer.

Mme. Esenbel, wife of the First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy, was one of the ladies asked to serve at the tea table. Others were Mme. Tulga, wife of the Military Attache of the Turkish Embassy; Mme. Caner, wife of the Naval Attache, and Mme. Baba, whose husband is the attache at the embassy; Mrs. Charles Warner and Mrs. Frank Slingluff.

Mme. Esenbel took advantage of the first springlike day to wear a lovely hat of pale blue straw, the rolled brim filled with pastel flowers.

Few of the guests there knew that Mrs. Warner is a sister of the famous Errol Flynn. Fair, with an enchanting smile, and a dimple, the sister of the noted movie star, wore black with a tiny hat of twisted pink satin on her brow.

Mrs. Frank Slingluff reported that her newlywed daughter, Suzanne, and her bridegroom, Frank Holcomb, are expected back from their honeymoon next week. Attractive Mrs. Walter Reed Weaver, widow of the general, chatting with Major Warner and Aubrey Stark, revealed that she's now in the real estate business, is doing nicely and loves it.

Robert Kelley, one-time Counselor of the American Embassy in Istanbul, was staying on through the afternoon and others were Capt. Charles Windsor, USN, and Mrs. Windsor, wearing a fascinating black hat with jet fringe dripping from the brim.

Handsome Dr. Fernando Sacasa, came in, so did Paul Murphy of the Pan American Union; Miss Dorothy Tirrell, wearing blue lame and a blue velvet hat to match her eyes. She's off on Tuesday for a whirl in Boston to be away until the first. The Baroness Irene Marie Ungern and Dr. William Thornton Spence, were in conversation, and Mrs. Matthew Whittall in a snowy ermine hat and tibbett, kept a gay group around her all the time.

Then there were Dr. Don Knowlton, Col. Henry Cheadle, and Mrs. Cheadle in black satin with a paradise bird on her tiny black hat; Mr. and Mrs. William S. McCornick, Don Luttrell, and Miss Evelyn Walker.

Don't Let Them Accumulate

Leftovers should be used up as soon as practical or they are very apt not to be used at all. Don't tuck things away in small bowls and then forget to investigate them until they are uninteresting and have no food value. Take an inventory every morning and use up those leftovers as soon as possible.

Open From the Top

When working in a steamy kitchen, take time to lower the windows from the top. You will be in no draft that way and that steamy heavy feeling from so much cooking will be gone in a second. If housewives would pay more attention to this they would not be so tired at the end of preparing a big meal.

Wife Has Been Demoralized for a Year, Since Her Adored Husband Who Lauds Her as Perfect Helpmeet Frankly Admitted He's Tired of Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is 27 and I am 29. We have been married six years and have two sweet children whom we both adore. He has been a good husband and wonderful father and we never argued; that's why this problem is such a shock to me.

When our second child was born 17 months ago, in another town, Dick came on here ahead of us to find a place to live; and here met a girl with whom he started an affair that continued for months before I learned of it, a year ago.

It was all too plain that he was treating me as a sister or friend, not as a wife, and I had consulted a doctor about it. When I begged him to see a doctor, too, he finally told me about the girl. When I asked if he loved her, he said he certainly didn't love me, and if it hadn't been her, it would have been somebody else.

When I asked why, he said, "Didn't you ever hear of a man getting tired of his wife?" I said that I had, but not at his age. When I asked if he would have married the girl if free, he said probably yes; but when I asked if he wanted a divorce, he said if we parted he probably would fight to get me back. He says I am a perfect wife and that he likes my looks and personality—so his attitude is a mystery.

Now They Have Separate Rooms

MAKING him happy was my whole life before, but now I have a feeling of wanting to hurt him as he has hurt me; and what hurts most is not the affair—that I might forgive—but his attitude: "It wasn't so terrible. . . . It was something I wanted to do, so I did it."

Now we are both miserable. We have separate rooms and at one point he called me stupid, saying most women would have left him right off. Maybe that's what he wants me to do: and his mother has said it might help if I did, but I have to think of the children's future.

They are so fond of him their hearts would break if we separated; and I know what it means to lose a parent, as my mother died when I was 14, leaving my life pretty empty of love and affection. Dick's dad died when he was 12.

Do we have a chance of restoring happiness. Is it true that when trust is gone, so has love? Can a man fall out of love with his wife and then revive that love? Does he want me to stay? Please advise.

V. B.

Too-Fervid Love Usually Surfeits

DEAR V. B.: It seems to me the relationship broke down due to your smothering exclusive concentration of love-interest in Dick. The business of living with no other thought than to love and be loved by somebody else can be carried to excess.

The human soul has need of space and privacy within the framework of family relationship, whether between mates or between parent and child. Such space and privacy are afforded in terms of some impersonality, some detachment, some investment of interest on the part of each in self-expressive activities that have no sentimental "you-me" import.

Making Dick happy was your whole life, you say, until you were baldly confronted with his ostensible ingratitude, which he cannot explain but only defiantly defends by saying he is tired of you—the perfect wife, whose looks and personality he admires—and in a mood for change, any change.

Allow Husband Room to Breathe

THERE is the clue to what happened, I think. Dick is not so much "out of love" with you as he is fed up with your love of him; or rather, with your overweening, self-abnegating, cloyingly obliging ways of expressing it earlier. Hence his revulsion and revolt, to which you respond with piteous numbed distrait clinging, tinctured by resentment — which further fans his impatient defensiveness.

Can happiness be regained? Since you are still together, though in separate rooms, there is a chance that you might heal the breach if you could rise above your injured attitude, see your own mistakes which surfeited Dick, and then in a healthier, more dispassionate frame of mind, hit a pace in partnership that would take him off the defensive and let both of you start from scratch in working out a new adjustment.

Given a few weeks or months in which to see and feel that you are no longer "smarting" at him or pallidly yearning for intimacy, or trying to move in on his personality in any way, Dick's interest may revive and he may take the initiative in closing the rift.

Satisfying Everyone

If some of your guests do not care for onions in the filling of the roast turkey or chicken and others do, why not stuff the neck of the fowl with filling without onion, then add the onions and stuff the center of the bird with the filling containing onions. More people like them than do not as a general rule, so this cavity will hold a greater amount of stuffing.

Spice Tins

Turn the lids on spice containers so they are tightly closed when not in use. The air tends to make spices lose their flavor and if the top is closed this cannot happen.

A letter sent out from AAUW National Headquarters voiced the urgency felt by the association's national president, Dr. Althea Kratz Hottel of the University of Pennsylvania, and by the chairman of the national committees on international relations and social studies, Dr. Louise Pearce of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research at Princeton, N. J., and Dr. Mabel Newcomer, professor of economics and sociology at Vassar College.

In line with policies voted by the AAUW national convention last spring, the association has taken action to indorse European recovery legislation which would embody the following points:

1. That sufficient funds be granted for a genuine long-range program for reconstruction, not a mere relief program. The full 6.8 billion dollar initial appropriation asked by President Truman for the first 15 months regarded as essential.

2. That the administration of the ERP be such as to permit prompt action and insure flexibility, in order that varying needs of the recipient countries, under changing conditions, may be met.

3. That the monetary aspects of the program would not impose United States domination on the economy of the recipient countries.

4. That the European Recovery Program, as it develops, operate as far as possible through the United Nations and its affiliated international agencies.

AAUW has indorsed the Eaton bill, and branches has been asked to follow amendments to this bill and any legislation which may develop in the Senate, giving their support to whatever measures retain these basic principles.

The association's committee on international relations considers the European Recovery Program of crucial importance to world peace, an dthe social studies committee rates it as having top priority from the domestic standpoint, since "world recovery is essential for the stability of our domestic economy."

"Not only can we afford it, but we can't afford not to have it," the committee decided.

Real Antiques

We do not like to use a brass polish on our antique brass as we wish to avoid that bright finish. Try rubbing with a solution of vinegar and salt and it will make it clean-looking without that bright finish.

An Ironing Tip

Save the silk underwear until last when ironing with an electric iron. Then the iron may be disconnected for some particularly delicate lingerie and one can iron better without the cord when it come to finer work.

In Their Right Places

Use judgment when putting things away in the refrigerator and put the perishable articles closest to the ice or unit. Don't just pack them away in a haphazard fashion.

Your Questions on Homemaking

I have a navy blue gabardine dress on which I spilled some nail polish remover. Immediately I soaked it in cleaning fluid and when it dried it was slightly stiff and whitish. I wonder if there is anything you can suggest to remove this spot or cover it up?
V. B.

Unless there is rayon in the gabardine that has been permanently damaged by the remover, the stiffness of the spot can be taken out by rubbing the dry material between the fingers. Or moisten the spot with water, sprinkle powdered pepsin over it and let stand for 20 to 30 minutes. Brush off the powder and rinse well. To restore the color, apply navy blue dye to the spot with a paint brush. Be sure not to use too much water with the paint or it will spread to surrounding areas. Placing the spotted portion over a towel to absorb excess moisture will also help prevent spreading. Experiment with the dye you use on a hidden part of the material to get a good match of color.

What is a successful home method for cleaning stuffed felt toys and felt shoes? R. H. E.

If the felt in the toys and shoes is color fast, they can be shampooed. To be sure that you're not using too much water, make a soap jelly by dissolving 1 cup of mild soap flakes or chips in 2 cups warm water. Allow to cool and become jellied. Place some in a large bowl and whip with an egg beater. Be sure to make enough, because you clean with the suds alone. Now, using a brush, work the suds into the felt. Work over only a small spot at a time. When the suds become soiled, remove with the blade of a dull knife and renew. Continue scrubbing until area is clean. Remove suds and sponge area with a cloth wrung out of clear water until thoroughly rinsed. Now, continue scrubbing, area by area, until piece is covered. Work quickly so the stuffing is not soaked. Hang in well ventilated place to dry. Stuff shoes with soft paper before drying to retain the shape.

I would like to mail my sister a coconut cake for her birthday anniversary on the 22d. Do you have any suggestions for keeping the cake moist and whole in transit? Or do you think a pound cake with a frosting (4X sugar) would travel better? J. A. J.

If packed correctly a layer cake should travel as well as a loaf, such as a pound cake. A powdered sugar icing to which butter or margarine has been added would travel better than some of the icings which get hard on standing. To pack the cake, place an inch layer of popcorn on the bottom of the box. Place the cake on a stiff piece of cardboard and put it into a stiff pasteboard carton which is large enough to allow 2 or 3 inch space on all sides and top. Now, cover the cake with waxed paper, top and sides. Fill all of the surrounding area with dry popcorn. This is light, yet will prevent movement of the cake in the box. Be sure there is a layer of popcorn on top. Cover the top with wax paper and close box. Wrap securely with heavy paper and heavy string. Be sure to put address on the top of box and ask the postmaster to mark it "Perishable."

Do you know any place in Washington or Montgomery County where I can take a course in household sewing? I do not mean dress making but rather the correct way to mend sheets, alter children's clothes, darn, hemstitch and even smock and embroider. I have tried a local sewing center and the District and Montgomery County Boards of Education, but they offer only dress making and slip-cover making. I don't even know how to use a thimble, much less a machine! M. T. K.

I do not know where you can get training of this type but am hoping some of our readers do. Readers, if you have any suggestions for M. T. K., will you drop a card to this column, Room 408, Washington Post, Washington, 4, D. C.?

Can you publish some suggestions for a gift to be sent on an eleventh wedding anniversary? I understand the proper gift is steel. M. R.

Yes, the eleventh is the steel anniversary, but it's rather hard to find suitable gifts of this material for the occasion. A set of fine steel kitchen knives or other kitchenware, or cut steel buckles for shoes or belt might be appropriate. Perhaps some of our readers may have other suggestions.

Stop Eating Before You Get That Nice Stuffed Feeling!

By Ida Jean Kain

IT GIVES you quite a turn to find you've gained weight . . . food prices being what they are, too. Yes, quite a turn . . . you wonder how your weight can go up when prices are up. And you'd jump at the chance to get down to normal if you felt it did not necessitate going hungry, or lessening your energy.

Well, it's not as easy to diet on a budget, but you can do it as well as cut food costs, and improve your health! Only excess food goes to make fat, and reducing merely means eating less than is required to cover energy needs. No food is fattening until it goes over the top of your requirements, and after that, any food is fattening . . . how fattening depends on the calories.

The backbone of a protective reducing diet is protein, and there's the rub—protein foods are of high cost. There is no use talking about the cheaper cuts of meat . . . there isn't any such thing. But there are lean cuts . . . with no fat to go to waist.

Baked tongue served with barbecue sauce or mustard sauce is tasty and very low in calories—three slices for 100 calories. Doubling the serving does not raise the calories too high. A grilled cube steak may take more chewing, but it's filling at low cost, money and calories. Beef liver provides perfect nutrition.

YOU CAN PLAN low-cost, low-calorie menus. A meal of frankfurters, sauerkraut and a baked potato is hearty fare and excellent for the reducer. Or meat loaf, a baked potato and coleslaw. Restrict the butter or margarine for the potato to one-half pat. It's a saving. For dessert, have a low-calorie fruit.

If the family dish is lamb stew, have a generous serving, about a cup, but no seconds. Restrict bread to one slice. Have a large glass of skim milk or buttermilk and fruit.

Serve fish twice a week. The lean varieties include bass, bluefish, cod steak, flounder and haddock. However, the favorites, whitefish, mackerel and lake trout, are not too high in calories.

On low-cost, low-calorie meals, choose foods that furnish good nutrition and have a high satiety value—a "stick to the ribs" quality. A baked potato is more satisfying than a slice of bread or a roll. An egg, scrambled without fat, or a hard-cooked egg, has a higher satiety value than a poached egg or a soft-boiled egg. Cheese sticks to the ribs a long time . . . a grilled cheese, open-face sandwich is a filling luncheon dish.

INCLUDE BULKY FOODS to fill up space . . . salads are bulky. Cabbage and apple salad, or celery and apple; raw cabbage and carrot salad, combination green with cottage cheese—the noncream variety—or served with a sliced, hard-cooked egg, or grated American cheese. To keep the calories low, restrict French dressing to one-half tablespoon at the most, and use boiled dressing in place of mayonnaise. Or dilute a prepared salad dressing by whipping in skim milk with a rotary beater.

You do not have to go hungry to reduce weight; you do have to stop overeating. And to bring the calories below the number required, omit the rich desserts. That cuts costs, too. Stop eating before you get that nice, stuffed feeling! Yes, it's tough at first, but honestly it gets easier. Then before long you won't even want to overeat.

Doctor Tells Why X-Rays Skip Children

Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, tuberculosis chief of the District Health Department, Saturday explained for puzzled parents why children under 15 are ineligible for free chest X-rays.

The Washington Chest X-ray Survey to ferret out tuberculosis provides free chest examinations for all adults 15 years of age and older. Now in its second month of operation here, it hopes to X-ray some 600,000 persons by the campaign's end, June 15.

Children under 15, Dr. Coulter explained, very rarely develop tuberculosis to the point of becoming carriers of the disease.

"It is the adults who pass the tuberculosis germ along to their children," declared Dr. Coulter. "All parents, therefore are a potential menace to their children until chest X-rays have found them to be free from the tuberculosis germ.

Though X-ray units are set up in public schools, only those students who passed their fifteenth birthday are being examined.

By last night more than 125,000 workers and residents here had been X-rayed through the survey's facilities.

Reece Urges 2-Party South To Hold Rights

By The Associated Press

Chairman Carroll Reece of the Republican National Committee yesterday urged a two-party system in the South as one way of preventing what he called "infringements upon civil liberties."

He also challenged President Truman to urge Democratic Senators from the South not to filibuster against antilynching, antipoll tax, and other Administration-recommended "civil rights" proposals when they come up for action.

Southern Governors and legislators have denounced the President's 10-point civil rights program. It also calls for no segregation in transportation and Federal guarantees against discrimination in employment because of race.

They are talking of withholding Dixie's electoral votes from the President as one means of retaliation.

Reece is a former Congressman from the Republican First District of Tennessee. He said many of the President's recommendations "are duplicates of proposals which Republican members of Congress have been seeking to enact into law for many years."

He asserted that infringements upon civil liberties "are nearly always to be found where a one-party system prevails."

"Though there may be differences in degree," he went on, "that principle would apply regardless of whether the party bears the Communist name, as in Russia, the Nazi label in Germany, the Fascist label in Italy, or the Democrat label in Mississippi."

"Treasurer's Report" Includes More Than Figures

The little notes which sometimes accompany streetcar tokens contributed for Children's Hospital usually get no mention because of lack of space.

But I'd like to give you a sample of the sort of thing my mail turns up day after day. An anonymous donor recently wrote:

"I wondered where the tokens kept coming from, and then I found one while cleaning my husband's bureau drawer. Now I know."

Another anonymous contributor observed:

"It doesn't seem right to spend such a disproportionate amount of postage on just two tokens, so I'm fixing them up so that the proportionate cost of the postage will be smaller." The tokens were wrapped in a dollar bill.

Mrs. L. C. Hall of Edgewater, Md., took some tokens to Michigan when she and her husband moved up there. Now that the Halls are back in Maryland, the tokens are sent in "before they get lost again."

Literally hundreds of tokens turned up when winter clothing came out of storage. And the children have also been loyal contributors.

Jean and Pat Lord of 1412 15th st. nw. went from door to door asking for tokens and explaining what they were for. They didn't find them by the millions—but after a hard day's trudging, they turned in a very respectable collection.

In practically every case, the contributions are accompanied with a touching little story, and I wish we had room to print them all in detail. But we don't, so here are some additional acknowledgements:

Mary Margaret Maxwell, 4902 3d st. nw.; Shirley H. Goldblum, 32 Varnum st. ne.; Mrs. Walter J. Romejko, 1615 Kenyon st. nw.; Harry M. Ryder, 418 Cumberland ave.; C. P.; Robert A. Wildman, 2344 Nebraska ave. nw.; W. Scott Wilkerson, Mrs. Dell M. Winterfield, 1905 Kalorama rd. nw., and Bob Willson, 736 Jackson pl. nw., who found a token by tripping over it (while skating at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace).

Mrs. R. Filipowicz, 2139 Pennsylvania ave. nw.; H. Steward White, 4607 S. 30th rd., Arlington, Va.; Mrs. R. R. Renalds, 312 W. Main st., Front Royal, Va.; Shirley Schlossenberg, 3712 Brandywine st. nw.; Mrs. Kenneth J. Cosimano, Beverly Park Gardens, Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. J. E. Chase, Burke, Va.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Speaking of silly laws, John Georgiades, editor of the Greek News, recalls the one he encountered in Pocatello, Idaho, back in 1912. It provided that:

"The carrying of concealed weapons is forbidden, unless same are exhibited to public view."

PIED TYPE DEPT.

Blanche Berlin of 4912 3d st. nw. clips a letter to the editor which says:

". . . the Administration seems to have forgotten the need of actual conversation from war to peace."

OVERHEARD

(Bus driver talking to a colleague at Barney Circle): "So I says, 'Lady, there's no use complaining to me about curtailed service because that's something the company handles, not the drivers. As a matter of fact, we'd like to see more jobs for drivers, not less.' But she just turns up her nose and snaps, 'It's no wonder you lose your jobs when you make people wait so long for a bus,' and she steams off. Now I ask you, what can you do with a dame like that?"

And settle down—but that's just when
The phone bell always rings.

The author of those lines doesn't really smoke a pipe. She's 11-year-old Eleanor Busick of McLean, Va., whose daddy appears to have the same troubles complained of by the father of an 11-year-old relative of mine.

BANKER LAYS AN EGG

D. B. Harrison wonders if we've heard about the treasurer of a Ladies Aid Society who took some of the group's funds down to the bank.

Handing her deposit book and the cash to the teller, she murmured: "Aid money."

The teller, who was somewhat deaf, thought she had said "egg money," and replied brightly:

"My, isn't it wonderful what the old hens are doing these days."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Lionel Stander and his wife were at Sardi's bar, where Stander saw an actor he dislikes and who had a leading role in a hit musical . . . "I hate that guy," Stander told his wife. "I hate him so much, I wish he loses his job" . . . "You should never wish another actor out of a job," Mrs. Stander cautioned him. "That is—out of a job you can't fill."

Keenan Wynn's last Broadway show was "Strip for Action." Because he often carried valuables in his pockets Wynn decided to get a watchdog for his dressing room near the wings. Before each performance Wynn would place the dog inside the dressing room and bolt the door. He alone had the door key . . . One night, while Keenan was onstage, he heard the dog barking and growling and a man shouting. The comedian weighed the alternatives—to rush offstage and halt the ransacking of his dressing room, or to wait until his routine was finished. The actor waited; and by the time he came offstage, the thief was out the window.

Ezra Stone was an instructor at the American Academy of Dramatic Art. He addressed the classroom about the practical theater, and told the students to draw pencil marks through any lines in the script which they thought were unnecessary . . . Half the students had no pencils. Stone gave each of them pencils which he had taken from the offices of his then employer, George Abbott, and told the class: "This is the first lesson in the practical theater: Pay me 5 cents each for those pencils."

Brian Aherne once was grounded in Amarillo, Tex. during a flight to N. Y. He went to a hotel, obtained a room and there started to read the local newspaper. He read an ad which announced that Maurice Evans' troupe was performing in Amarillo that one night. Aherne learned where Evans was staying, telephoned the hotel, which was 4 blocks away, and said: "Come on over here. It's been two years since wev'e seen each other" . . . "No, you come over to my hotel, Brian," Evans insisted . . . "No, you come to my hotel," said Aherne . . . "No, you come to mine," said Evans . . . "Well, goodby, Maurice," said Aherne . . . "Goodby, Brian," said Evans.

Lou Clayton, of Clayton, Jackson & Durante, is one of the ablest rough-and-tumble fighters in show business. One night in Boston he heard the stage hands make insulting cracks about him and invited them all to step outside with him. They went into the alley, where the stage hands began to gang up on him . . . "Wait a minute. Fight fair," Clayton protested. "I'll take two at a time."

Reds, Nazis Talked Peace in '43

By Drew Pearson

During the war, mysterious reports leaked out of Stockholm that the Germans and the Russians were holding secret conversations in 1943 with a view to patching up a separate peace. United States military intelligence did its best to get full details of these conversations, and it was known that the talks were held between Nazi Ambassador Hans Thomsen and Soviet Ambassadress Mme. Alexandria Kollontay at a villa just outside of Stockholm.

Pearson

Since the war, however, the United States Army has captured the detailed account of these talks, and it can now be revealed that during the summer of 1943, shortly after the battle of Stalingrad, Hitler and Stalin came near patching up a separate peace which would have left the United States and Great Britain fighting the war alone.

The State Department has already released the secret talks between Foreign Minister Ribbentrop and Foreign Minister Molotov in Novmeber, 1940, by which Russia and Germany tried to concoct an alliance, but the documents regarding the second peace attempt in 1943 are still considered confidential.

However, here is the background story of what happened.

Secret Fishing Trip

In the summer of 1943, continued Soviet pressure for a United States-British second front across the English Channel finally resulted in a secret conference on Manitoulin Island in Lake Huron. Roosevelt visited the island on an alleged fishing trip, where he was joined by Churchill and later by Molotov, who flew via Siberia and Alaska to the island.

Molotov was extremely bitter. He complained that Allied delay in establishing a second front meant the loss of thousands of Russian lives. The Red army had suffered terrific punishment at Stalingrad. The German army was still far advanced in the Caucasus. Therefore, Molotov demanded that the American and British armies divert the strength of the Nazi military machine by starting a second front at once.

Roosevelt and Churchill replied that to start a second front before the United States Army was properly prepared might result in a setback which would prolong the war even longer. They also argued that the Russian general staff had agreed it would be difficult to start an operation across the English Channel at this time.

However, Molotov remained so bitter and so disgruntled that Roosevelt and Churchill were worried. Simultaneously some inkling of the Nazi-Soviet peace talks had trickled back to them.

Attempt to Carve Europe

In these talks, Russia had proposed that she be given one-half of Poland. To this the Nazis agreed. It was also proposed that Russia take over Iran and have free access to the Indian Ocean through the Gulf of Persia. To this the Nazis also agreed.

Hitler, in turn, wanted to keep Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Greece and Hungary as a part of the German Empire. To this the Russians agreed.

However, the conversations broke down on the age-old question of the Dardanelles and Turkey. For more than a century Russia has demanded an outlet to the sea through the Dardanelles. And in the secret peace talks of 1943, the Soviets repeated this traditional demand of the Czars.

Hitler, however, refused. Apparently he wanted Germany to reign supreme over the entire Mediterranean. He wanted no Russian influence in Turkey.

When Roosevelt and Churchill received an intimation of these Nazi-Soviet peace talks and realized Molotov's bitterness over failure to start a second front, they sent Cordell Hull and Anthony Eden to Moscow almost immediately.

In Moscow, Hull and Eden succeeded in smoothing Russian feelings—to some extent. However, Stalin wanted a firm commitment not only as to when the second front would start, but also as to what territory Russia would get after the war—especially in regard to Poland and the Balkans. He was worried about the Atlantic Charter's protection of the rights of small nations and didn't want to be bound by it. Therefore, Hull and Eden agreed that a meeting of Stalin, Roosevelt and Churchill would shortly be held to decide these problems.

This was what led to the Big Three meeting at Tehran.

At Tehran Stalin finally got an agreement regarding the second front—though not until after a tough battle with Churchill. Churchill at first argued that the place for the second front was through the Balkans, the back door to Europe, which he claimed would be easier military territory for an invasion.

But Stalin, probably thinking of exactly the same thing, and wanting the Red army in the Balkans, argued that the shortest road to Berlin was straight across the English Channel.

Churchill then countered with a second alternative, namely a landing on the Mediterranean coast of France and thence up the Rhone Valley to Germany.

Again Stalin was adamant. He wanted the English Channel operation or nothing.

Finally, Roosevelt, upon the advice of General Marshall, sided with Stalin. The United States was looking at the second front not from a political viewpoint, but only as a means of winning the war quickly.

WEST VIRGINIA . . . the mountain state

Ralph Waldo Emerson once said that "coal is portable climate" . . . and he was quite correct. But coal is more than merely a fuel to warm human beings. It is . . . and has been for hundreds of years . . . the cornerstone of our modern economy. The use of coal . . . to make steel, drive locomotives, propel ships and to perform countless other tasks . . . has steadily raised the standard of living for hundreds of millions of people the world over. We West Virginians take pride in our State's importance in the production of this vital fuel. Annually, West Virginia produces over 25 per cent of the Nation's bituminous coal. We are also proud of our State's position as a leader in the output of petroleum, natural gas, iron ore and agricultural products . . . and in the recent spectacular growth of the chemical industry, with the resulting benefits to all of us. We welcome this opportunity given us by The Hecht Company to invite you to visit our State . . . you can easily drive to West Virginia's vacation paradise from Washington on even a short week-end or holiday. Many of you are already familiar with the rugged beauty of the Mountain State . . . have enjoyed the facilities of our splendid State parks, which are designed to preserve our natural scenic attractions and our many spots of historic interest to all Americans. Our State Motto, Montari Semper Liberi . . . "Mountaineers Always Free" . . . sums up our political philosophy in a nutshell. We have lived according to this philosophy since the days when our hardy pioneer forefathers crossed the rugged mountains . . . during the time when we took our place in the Union as the independent State of West Virginia . . . and through our 85 years of prosperous and productive Statehood.

Hubert S. Ellis

President, West Virginia State Society

WEST VIRGINIA . . . Was inhabited prehistorically by an American-Indian race known as the Mound Builders. Remnants of their burial mounds remain in the Ohio and Kanawha Valleys . . . evidence of the civilization of some of the earliest inhabitants of North America. The State was first visited by white men in 1671, and, according to records recently turned up in England, the first settlement was established at Shepherdstown in 1719. West Virginia became a State in 1863, following "secession" of the territory from her mother State, Virginia.

WEST VIRGINIA . . . The Nation's coal bin. She produces more bituminous coal than any other State . . . more than one-fourth of the Nation's total. She is also a leading producer of petroleum, natural gas, glass sand and iron. Her Kanawha valley is one of the most heavily industrialized areas of the country. Charleston is one of the world's largest manufacturing centers of synthetic chemicals . . . producing lucite, vinylite and polyehtylene resins, antifreezes, ammonia, chlorine, alcohols, and oxygen for industrial use. What are claimed to be the world's largest synthetic rubber plant and the largest flat glass plant are also located in this booming valley. Wheeling is a center of steel and tin plate production. But perhaps more important . . . to millions of American women . . . the raw material for every nylon stocking ever made came from West Virginia.

WEST VIRGINIA . . . High in production of soft coal and hardwood . . . is second in the country in hardwood output. In the fertile valleys between her tall mountain peaks, West Virginians raise wheat, corn, oats, hay, tobacco, livestock and fruit. Grimes Golden and Golden Delicious apples are said to have been developed on West Virginia fruit farms.

WEST VIRGINIA . . . A "Little Switzerland" of America . . . is famous for the scenic grandeur of her hills and valleys. West Virginia has an average elevation of 1,500 feet, the highest of any State east of the Mississippi. Points of interest for tourists include historic Charles Town, which was planned and settled by George Washington's brother, Charles . . . Berkeley Springs, a favorite recreation spot of our first President . . . the world-famous spa at White Sulphur Springs . . . and the old Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, which carried coal from the Cumberland mines down to Washington, then a thriving port. West Virginia also boasts an extensive system of State parks and forests . . . and the Monongahela and George Washington National Forests.

WEST VIRGINIA . . . Boasts a number of fine institutions of higher learning . . . the University of West Virginia . . . Concord College . . . Fairmont College . . . West Virginia State College . . . and Greenbrier College. Champ Clark, former Speaker of the House of Representatives, once served as President of Marshall College, at Huntington . . . and Dwight Morrow was born there while his father was President of Marshall College.

WEST VIRGINIA . . . Whose world-famous citizens include General Thomas J. "Stonewall" Jackson . . . David Hunter Strother, artist, author, soldier and diplomat . . . and Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War during World War I. Author Frank Stockton penned many of his stories at Charles Town. West Virginia's James Rumsey demonstrated the successful operation of a steamboat at Shepherdstown in 1787 . . . 20 years before Fulton invented his steamboat.

WEST VIRGINIA . . . Decisive battlefield during numerous wars fought on U. S. soil. The Battle of Point Pleasant, on October 10, 1774, was a turning point in the frontier struggles against unfriendly Indian tribes. The last Battle of the Revolution in which British troops fought was at Fort Henry, near Wheeling, in September, 1782. John Brown's Raid, which helped touch off the War Between the States, occurred at Harpers Ferry in October, 1859.
